WILL DECIDE AT LAST MINUTE.

Wilson to Argue in His Own Mind the Choice of Chairman.

SEA GIRT, N. J., July 5.—Governor Wilson's mind is still "like an open book," to quote him, exactly, on his choice for chairman of the Democratic committee. He said he would not decide until the last minute. "With regard to things of that sort," he said, "I never make up my mind until I announce my decision. When I have heard everything that is to be heard, I decide. I have made it a rule to do that on principle. I do not believe in snap judgment. When there is a question like this to decide, I listen to all arguments and then argue it in my own mind. At present my mind is in the midst of the argument."

William A. McAdoo, the New Yorker who built the tubes beneath the Hudson river, had a long conference with Governor Wilson during the forenoon. Wilson also had a talk with Josephus Daniels and Robert S. Hudspeth, national committeemen from North Carolina and New Jersey, respectively, who remained over from yesterday's visit of the national committee.

Details came out today of how Chicago, instead of New York, was selected as the meeting place for the Democratic national committee July 15, at the suggestion of Governor Wilson. Although several eastern committeemen had agreed upon New York, the governor asked that Chicago be selected after he had been advised by southern and western committeemen that many members would be represented by proxy at New York. These men, he was told, could and would be present at Chicago.

When Norman E. Mack, in his capacity as chairman, first announced that New York had been selected, Josephus Daniels of North Carolina and two western committeemen went to Mr. Mack.

"It is a poor choice" they told him. "The western members won't have time to get home and come back to New York."

"Of course," Mr. Mack replied, "I have no choice but to announce the decision as chairman. Most of the men tell me they prefer New York." So Mr. Daniels laid the case before Governor Wilson.

"One third of the committee will be represented by proxy if we meet in New York," he told the nominee.

"That would not be right," commented the governor. "We want them in person. Who would hold these proxies?"

"We don't know", said Daniels.

"Then it won't do," said the governor. Presently the governor sent for Mr. Mack and suggested the change. The committee was canvassed again and Chicago was chosen.

Joseph T. Timulty, the governor's private secretary, told his chief today what he described as "the inside story" of the Illinois change at Baltimore from Clark to Wilson. It all came about, Mr. Timulty said, that he had been informed yesterday through unrelenting coaxing of Mrs. Roger Sullivan, wife of the former Illinois committeeman, and Roger Sullivan's boy.

"When young Sullivan was at Lawrenceville going to preparatory school," the secretary said, "he was very fond of you. When your name was before the country as a candidate, he went to his father and asked him to support you. The elder Sullivan, however, did not think as his son did and after the primaries told the boy that he would have to support Clark, the primary choice. The boy won Mrs. Sullivan's approval and together they began a Wilson campaign on the leader. The upshot of it was that Sullivan promised that he would use his influence for you in case of a break from Clark. When the break came the Clark leaders tried to hold him firm, but he told them he had a promise to fulfill and kept his word."

ROOSEVELT CHALENGED.

La Follette Again Asks Him to Publish His Expense Account.

MADISON, Wis., July 5.—United States Senator La Follette in a spirited article today asks Colonel Roosevelt for the second time, to publish his expense account, or else "a candid statement of his reasons for thus spurning one of the basic principles of public morality and political decency." When La Follette made public a statement of his campaign receipts during the Ohio primary contest he called on Roosevelt to do likewise. There has been no response.

Mr. La Follette says in part: "Big business, with big money derived from unfair privileges, is even in politics and is ever ready to place its funds back of a likely winner, who is either subservient, in the sense that a chisel is subservient to the hand of the carpenter, or serviceable to the extent that he is harmless in performance.

"Special privilege puts money into political campaigns by way of investment. From this investment it demands substantial rewards. It is to protect the public interest from rewards, such as these conceived in twilight and consummated in secret, that the people demand publicity of campaign contribution.

"Theodore Roosevelt entered the contest for the Presidential nomination as a progressive. He made a strenuous campaign for votes and a noisy scramble for southern delegates on the ground that he represented progressive doctrine. In this fight he had the backing of the 'Steel Trust' and the 'Harvester Trust'. Financial giants like Perkins, Hanna and Munsey contributed to his cause. His campaign was characterized by a riotous expenditure of money. Yet he has made no public accounting. He has not taken the American people into his confidence. He has ignored the progressive principle of publicity."

WILSON'S NOMINATION PLEASING.

BOTOTA, Colombia, July 5.—The Colombian newspapers in general publish editorials commenting favorably on the nomination of Woodrow Wilson as candidate for President by the Democratic convention at Baltimore.

TWENTY-EIGHT OF DEAD IDENTIFIED.

Fifty-One Others Injured in Train Wreck at Corning.

An Investigation Begun Into Lackawanna Road Disaster.

CORNING, N. Y., July 5.—Twenty-five of the dead victims of a wreck yesterday on the Lackawanna railroad have been identified, and 10 still awaited identification today, eight in Elmira and eight in Corning. Forty-one persons were killed and 51 injured in the disaster. Only one additional identification was made in the early hours of the morning, Mrs. Louis Friedman of New York being recognized by her brother.

Of the 51 injured but four—Miss Mary Brennan, James Griffith and Nellie Schandel, all of Newark, and Max Blaman of Jersey City are considered seriously hurt.

A pathetic case was that of William R. Laird of Buffalo, whose entire family, consisting of his father, his wife, five-year-old daughter and two-year-old son, were killed. Mr. Laird, who is employed in a Buffalo printing establishment, left that city last night, knowing only that his father, George Laird, had been killed. William Laird visited the local morgues, and at the first he found his little boy and girl, laid side by side on a single stretcher. At the second morgue he found the body of his wife, beside that of his father. The family had taken advantage of holiday excursion rates for a reunion in Buffalo. It was George Laird's first railroad trip in 60 years.

Coroner Herbert B. Smith announced today that it was impossible to have the train crews on hand for several days, and the inquest opened last night will not be resumed before Tuesday. The coroner states that General Superintendent Kline of the Lackawanna has given him assurance that the company will aid him in every way.

A state investigation of the accident was begun today by representatives of the public service commission, Second district, who visited the scene of the wreck this morning. Among the officials here is Archibald Buchanan, Jr., superintendent supervisor of equipment of the public service commission. "I have not yet had sufficient opportunity to form a complete opinion as to the cause of the wreck," said Mr. Buchanan today. "It is, however, to the best of my information the most serious rear-end collision in railroad history. It outclasses the Manchester-New York wreck, which was caused by a broken rail, both as to the number of dead and injured.

Another body was identified shortly before 11 o'clock. It proved to be that of Mrs. Bemar Calto of Morristown, New Jersey.

William Schroeder, engineer of the express train that crashed into the passenger, is at his home in Elmira under the care of physicians. Two bodies identified later were those of Mrs. W. M. Armstrong of Hoboken, N. J., and John Tait, Brooklyn. The latter had a gold medal, apparently of basketball team, inscribed "Champion of America, won by John B. Tait, 1911."

WILSON SENDS REPLIES.

Tells Underwood He Anticipates Pleasure in Working With Him.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—Democratic Leader Oscar W. Underwood of the House has received the following telegram from Governor Wilson:

"Your message of congratulation has given me deep pleasure. It cheers me as much as it strengthens me to have the support of a man whose character and leadership in Congress all the country admires. Please accept my assurances of my warm personal regard.

"Woodrow Wilson."

Speaker Clark has received the following message from Governor Wilson:

"Your message of congratulation has given me deep pleasure and your generous offer to do all you can to aid in my election is characteristic of your readiness to undertake every task the party imposes upon you. Pray accept my warmest assurances of personal regard and of pleasure in the anticipation of working with you."

"Woodrow Wilson."

FOSS RECEIVES TELEGRAM.

His Message of Congratulation Generous and Appreciated by Wilson.

BOSTON, July 5.—Governor Foss today received the following telegram from Governor Wilson in response to a telegram of congratulation on Wilson's nomination for President.

"Your message of congratulation is very generous and I appreciate it deeply. It will be delightful to cooperate with the men who have proved their capacity for leadership."

KEYSTONE PARTY TO MEET.

Political Organization to Hold Convention in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, July 5.—The Keystone party, the independent political organization of Pennsylvania, will hold its state convention here this afternoon and it is the expectation of one faction in the party to name a state ticket, with a view of later forming a fusion agreement with the Democrats. It is expected that if the plans of the Gibboney-Gorman faction prevail the convention will endorse for state treasurer William H. Berry of Delaware county, who heads the Democratic ticket.

One faction of the Keystone party, said to be in favor of entering the national campaign and naming Presidential electors favorable to Theodore Roosevelt, will seek to have the convention postpone action until after the "third party" convention at Chicago. This wing of the party is known as the Flynn faction. The Gibboney-Gorman faction is opposed to this plan, having declared in favor of a complete divorce of local and state politics from the national campaign.

FORMER PREMIER ATTACKED.

Tang Shao Yi Slips Away from Would-Be-Assassin.

TIEN TSIN, China, July 5.—Tang Shao Yi, the former premier in the Chinese republic cabinet, cleverly gave an alleged would-be-assassin the slip today and remains here for the moment in the temporary safety, while his would-be-slayer is on board a ship on the way to Shanghai.

Tang Shao Yi with his family were already on board the steamer when the former Tao Tai, Chang Chun, approached and introduced to the ex-premier a friend named Wang Chen Hsiang. The latter promptly covered Tang Shao Yi with two pistols and demanded to know why he had run away from Pekin. Tang Shao Yi's explanation was outwardly well received by Wang Cheng Hsiang, who, however, announced that he intended to accompany Tang Shao Yi to Shanghai. Wang Cheng Hsiang then retired to his berth and as soon as his back was turned, Tang Shao Yi and his family sought safety by slipping off the steamer and returning to land. The steamer departed almost immediately afterward for Shanghai.

SOLDIERS AND POLICE HURT.

Seamen's Strike in Havre Accompanied by Rioting.

HAVRE, France, July 5.—The strike of seamen and dock laborers, which is spreading rapidly throughout France, was accompanied late last evening by serious rioting here. A number of strikers took possession of a local steamer and when expelled and driven off by the police gathered again at the docks and met the police and a detachment of infantry, which had been called to support them, with showers of stones, bricks and other missiles.

Many of the soldiers and police were injured by bricks hurled from windows of houses in adjacent streets. The strikers were finally forced to return, but retreated slowly, erecting barricades consisting of wagons and furniture in many of the streets. They broke all the windows in the two principal police stations of the city. Among the ring leaders of the strike were several excited women wearing flaming red sashes. Military reinforcements arrived here this morning from Rouen.

TROUBLE AT BORDEAUX.

A Serious Fight Occurs Between Strikers and the Police.

BORDEAUX, July 5.—The strike of the dockers here has been only partially effective. A serious fight occurred today between strikers and policemen on the arrival of steamship Magellan from South America. Several policemen were hurt.

A GENERAL TIE-UP PREDICTED.

Secretary Vidal Optimistic Over Progress of Seamen's Strike.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Although the steamship companies declare that their vessels are arriving and leaving without unusual delay, Secretary James D. Vidal of the National Transport Workers' Federation is optimistic over the progress of the seamen's strike and prophesies a general tie-up of marine transportation within the next two days.

"The situation in New York is assuming serious proportions," declared Mr. Vidal. "The men are greatly encouraged and intend to continue the fight with renewed vigor. Crews are deserting ships on arrival at ports and no practical seamen and firemen are being found to fill the places made vacant by the strikers.

"Messages from delegates in Havana, Vera Cruz and Galveston are to the general effect that ships arriving in those ports are being deserted by their crews and the longshoremen are voting to help the strike."

ONE AMERICAN KILLED.

Panama Police and Marine Clash During Celebration of the Fourth.

PANAMA, July 5.—The report of a serious brawl between the Panama police and a number of United States marines, while the Americans were celebrating the Fourth of July last night, is confirmed this morning. A fight occurred late in the evening, with the result that one American citizen, named R. D. David, was killed and two American marines and six soldiers belonging to the Tenth Infantry regiment, as well as two American civilians, wounded. The wounded men are in Ancon Hospital. Two Panama policemen also were wounded. The United States legation is investigating the affair.

REBELS SUFFER LITTLE LOSS.

Police Outpost in Santiago Suburbs Attacked by Insurgents.

SANTIAGO, July 5.—A force of insurgents late last night attacked a police outpost in the suburbs of this city, shooting and killing one policeman. The rebels retired apparently without loss. Government troops were dispatched immediately on their trail. The citizens are much alarmed, as the insurgents were supposed to have been completely dispersed and driven off to the woods. The strength of the attacking force is not known.

FEDERALS WILL BE DELAYED.

The Railroad 40 Miles to Chihuahua Destroyed.

AT GENERAL HUERTA'S HEADQUARTERS, BACHIMBA, Mexico, July 5.—The brief resistance of the rebels, which preceded their retreat, caused comparatively little loss of life, but the destruction of the railroad for 40 miles to Chihuahua is so extensive as to prevent the arrival of the main federal columns at the former rebel capital for at least three days.

SOME OLD-TIME FEATURES.

his full height, six feet four, and was at the same time so uncommonly strong that he was nearly always the victor in wrestling matches for which he had a decided liking. He was a muscular clodhopper, but he had a reputation for being fair and square in his feats of strength.

He was also noted for his pensive moods, or fits of abstraction, and would pass quickly from outbursts of droll humor to spells of silence that seemed to border on melancholy. He is described as having then been a little more ungainly and uncouth looking than most of the youths of the backwoods region, not only very tall, but raw boned, with disproportionately long arms and legs, large features, a dark sunburned skin, and hair that seemed never to have been touched by brush or comb.

As to his habiliments he wore deerskin trousers, which, through having been soaked with rain had shrunk tightly to his limbs, exposing some inches of his skin between these and his heavy shoes, with the scanty trousers usually held by a single suspender over a course home-made shirt, and wearing in summer a rough and shapeless straw hat, and in winter a coon-skin cap.

When he was 19 he left the Indiana farm and crossroads store to become a flat-boat hand, and he went down the Mississippi to New Orleans. But he had little liking for river life and was soon back at the old place, where he continued to labor and live as before till 1830 when his father and the family made another move westward to Illinois.

It involved a 15-days' journey and Abe, as he was called, drove the ox team containing the family's goods and chattels, with the family on the top. Then he helped his father to build another log cabin and, for building a fence around it, he split the first rails that gave him that famous political nickname "the rail splitter" in the Presidential campaign 8 years afterwards.

Two years after his removal to Illinois, when he was 21, he left home and, in his own words, struck out for himself, taking jobs whenever he could get them. Such is the early history of Abraham Lincoln.

A little later he again engaged as a flat-boat hand and went to New Orleans where, in May 1831, he saw slaves sold by auction. This auction made a deep impression on him and he often referred to it in later life, and said it made his heart bleed. But he soon tired of boating on the Mississippi, and lived for several years at New Salem, in Illinois, a small mill village where he did odd jobs, sometimes working in the mill, sometimes as clerk in the only store there, and sometimes found himself out of employment.

He was still there, and 23 years old, when the Black Hawk war broke out, and on account of his great strength he was chosen as the leader of a gang of adventurous young men in the vicinity to fight the Indians. So, when the Black Hawk war was ended, he had acquired some popularity in New Salem by his prowess, and he turned his attention to politics, and at the next election became a candidate for the legislature, but was defeated.

Then the hard struggle of his life to make a living became harder. He could get no employment, till a man of dissolute habits opened a small store and took him in as a partner, to share profits instead of paying wages. But the store proved a bad failure and Lincoln, as well as his partner, was saddled with the debts of the concern. After this he became a deputy surveyor, and later was appointed postmaster of New Salem. But the mail was so small that he carried it in his hat, and the surveying instruments and horse he had acquired were sold by the sheriff to pay the store debts.

The time had now come when, more than ever before, he saw the need of improving his education and he decided, if possible, by hard study to become a lawyer as a step toward political office. So he walked 15 miles to borrow a copy of Blackstone's Commentaries from a village attorney. This he laboriously read and at the next election ran again for the legislature, and much to his delight, was elected as a Whig and supporter of Henry Clay. This was the turning point in his career. He then wore a suit of Kentucky jeans, more or less patched and ragged, with shoes and cap to match and, as he had no change of clothes, his friends made him aware that this was hardly the costume in which an Illinois statesman should represent the county of Sangamon, at Vandalia the state capital, so they loaned him money enough to buy a suit of ready-made clothes.

He was fortunately re-elected three times—in 1836, 1838 and 1840—yet he failed to make himself at all prominent as a legislator, although a hard worker in routine matters assigned to him and ambitious of distinction. His most conspicuous act was his protest with only one other member against a pro-slavery resolution that the legislature adopted. He thus put himself on record as an abolitionist when all except two of the legislature were pro-slavery men and abolitionists were being denounced as no better than pirates.

After Lincoln left the legislature he removed from New Salem to Springfield, Illinois, and having been admitted to the bar, for which he had qualified himself by long continued study, he formed a partnership with a lawyer of good standing. Here he became a successful advocate who commanded general respect for his honesty of purpose and the strength and uprightness of his character. He was an advocate of truth and justice, would refuse or abandon cases when he saw that his client was in the wrong, and always advised his clients against any unfair means of gaining their ends. Hence he became known as "Honest Abe," and when he knew that he was protesting against a wrong or prosecuting a wrongdoer and defending the innocent he often showed an earnestness, a depth of feeling and a fervid keenness of reasoning that became eloquent and were effective with both court and jury.

His reputation for saying nothing that he did not know to be true gave force to all his statements and arguments. All who knew him had faith in his conscientiousness and so, when he appeared in a case, the presumption was that he had right on his side. His practice and his income thereby increased and he was about to marry a Miss Ann Rutledge, a girl to whom he was devotedly attached, when suddenly, like a thunderbolt out of a clear sky, came news of her death. He was so prostrated by this that he had to take to his bed. The intensity of his grief even caused his nearest friends to fear for his reason. But time, the great healer, restored him, and he became engaged to Miss Mary Todd of Kentucky, whom he married.

Lincoln's avowed ambition after he entered the Illinois legislature was to attain political prominence but he never of course thought he had any chance of reaching a position higher than that of a Congressman. He however became

POLO TOURNEY BEGINS JULY 20.

Watch Hill, Overture and Army and Navy Cups to be Played For at Point Judith Club.

In sending out the conditions and tentative dates for the championships and other matches to be played at the Point Judith Polo Club, Narragansett Pier, from July 20 to August 24, the Polo Association gives out some information which is entirely new. The dates are not definitely settled, but it is expected that the Watch Hill and Overture cups will be played for during the first week, the senior and open championships and the Army and Navy cups during the second, the junior championship in the third and the Atlantic cups in the last week of the tournament.

Extra events will be for the Ranelagh cups, the National Point cups, the pony handicap matches and the annual show of polo ponies. All mounts of the competitors in the pony handicap matches are subject to being claimed at the price of $500 with the manager of the Point Judith Polo Club before 8 o'clock in the evening of the competition. The purpose of this competition is to promote a form of handicap play which eliminates the highest class ponies in at least one series of matches.

It will be the fourth successive year that the championships of the Polo Association have been played on the Point Judith ground. Entries for the senior championship, won for the last three years by Meadow Brook, close July 13. The junior championship won in 1909 by New Haven, in 1910 by Myopia 2d and last year by Bryn Mawr, is subject to the same rules regarding entries and notice. For the open championship, which was not played for last year, the entries also close July 13. The open championship is for a trophy presented by Joseph B. Thomas in 1910, when it was won by a team from the Ranelagh Club, England, consisting of R. N. and F. Grenfell the Earl of Rocksavage and F. A. Gill.

Entries for the Watch Hill, Overture and Army and Navy cups close July 9. The army will not make team entries from regiments in the latter competition. For the first time asystematic effort is being made to bring together a team of the four best individual players and the best army ponies to represent the service in this and other open events at the Pier.

A preliminary tournament was held at Fort Sam Houston, near San Antonio, Texas, during the week of June 17. The Third Cavalry team—Lieutenant H. Johnson, Lieutenant Smith, Lieutenant Bristol and Lieutenant Wagner—beat the Third Artillery, made up of Lieutenant Gay, Lieutenant Burleson, Colonel C. G. Treat and Lieutenant Magruder, by 12 goals to 0. In the second game the fifth Field Artillery—Lieutenant Honeycutt, Captain Browne, Captain Churchill and Lieutenant Crane—beat the same Third Artillery team by 9 goals to 0.

After several postponements on account of rain the Fifth Artillery and the Third Cavalry teams met in the final. The cavalrymen played below the form expected of them after their recent brilliant performances, but the artillerymen were excellent in team work, and their No. 2, Captain Browne, made a fine and accurate hitting forward. The places were filled in this order: Fifth Field Artillery, 1, Lieutenant Honeycutt; 2, Captain Browne, captain; 3, Captain Churchill; back Lieutenant Crane; substitute, Lieutenant Prince. Third Cavalry, 1, Lieutenant H. Johnson; 2, Lieutenant Smith, captain; 3, Lieutenant Bristol; 4, Lieutenant Wagner; substitute, Lieutenant R. Johnson. The Fifth Artillery won by 9½ goals to 1[illegible].

The winners will enter a similar trying-out tournament to be held at Fort Riley, Kansas. The two best teams at Fort Riley will go to Washington for the final testing tournament, when they will oppose teams from the Eastern posts. The four best players on individual points and the best ponies will then be selected for the Point Judith tournament.

STRICKEN ON THE STREET.

Sudden Death of John Martin, One of Newport's Best Known Older Irish Citizens.

Mr. John Martin, one of the best known of the older Irish citizens of Newport, died suddenly Wednesday evening of an affection of the heart. He was in his eighty-fourth year and had been in good health, although showing somewhat the infirmities of old age. Having gone out early in the evening for his usual walk, he was returning to his home with his daughter, Mrs. William J. Walsh, on Church street. He was alone and when opposite the Thayer school was stricken and sat down on the coping. After a short time he was noticed by a passer-by, who hastened to his assistance. He was taken to his home, but in spite of all efforts to revive him he died shortly after reaching the house.

Mr. Martin was a native of County Galway, Ireland, and came to this country when about 20 years old. He located in Newport and for a considerable time was engaged by the Ruggles family on lower Thames street as coachman and gardener. In the latter capacity he laid out the garden opposite the foot of Ann street, on the harbor front, which was known for many years as the Ruggles garden and was a specially attractive place. The site is now occupied by the garage of the Newport Engineering Works. Later Mr. Martin kept a grocery store on the corner of Thames street and Lee avenue. In this he prospered and retired a number of years ago with a competency.

He made his home in recent years with his daughters and for the past 10 years had lived with Mrs. Walsh on Church street. Mr. Martin leaves three daughters—Mrs. William J. Walsh, Mrs. Andrew K. Quinn and Mrs. Curley. His wife died about 20 years ago and a daughter, Mrs. Manning, wife of the clerk of the supreme court in Boston, some time later.

A FORMER SUMMER RESIDENT.

Death of Mrs. Robert N. Carson at Chestnut Hill, Pa., Makes Husband's Bequest Effective.

Mrs. Carson, widow of Robert N. Carson of Philadelphia, who formerly owned a summer residence on the Cliffs, recently purchased by Mr. E. E. Knight, Jr., and added to his estate, died Thursday morning at her home at Chestnut Hill, Pa., after a long illness. She was 67 years old. Her death makes effective immediately the large bequest of her husband for the establishment of the Carson College for Orphan Girls, which is to be built on the Erdenheim estate.

Mr. Carson died October 19, 1907, and by the terms of his will $1,000,000 of his estate was to be applied at once to the girls' institution upon the death of his widow. He also provided that $5,000,000 should be set aside to be used as an endowment, the interest of this fund to be used for the purposes of maintenance.

Mrs. Carson was always identified with charitable work in Philadelphia. Two of her sisters married street railway men of that city, John B. Parsons and Robert N. Buckley, while a third is the wife of Thomas M. Thompson, formerly director of public works.

PORTSMOUTH.

Dr. and Mrs. Francis P. Conway Give Birthday Party for Their Elder Daughter.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

Dr. and Mrs. Francis P. Conway gave a party Wednesday afternoon in honor of the eleventh birthday of their elder daughter, Emily Alice, the company numbering 13 girls and two boys, two regrets being received on account of illness. The children played many lively games on the lawn and supper was served. The centre piece was a large frosted birthday cake decorated with red candles and at either end fancy baskets heaped with blossoms. Two plates filled with pink frosted cakes, with a small flag in the centre, added to the color scheme. Sandwiches and fancy cakes, with fruit punch, ice cream, peaches and oranges kept the children busy for a long time. Each lighted a candle on the cake, and before blowing it out wished for some happiness to fall to Miss Alice. The pink cakes with flags were carried home as souvenirs of the day. At the close all joined in singing, "The Star Spangled Banner."

The children brought birthday gifts of considerable value and the older persons present, who with one exception were guests at the house, acted as chaperones and assistants and also made up quite a little sum of money. They were Mrs. Coffin of Newport, Mrs. Sunderland of North Attleboro, Mrs. Abram Chace of Jacksonville, N. Y., and Mrs. Clara E. Dennis. The children were May Lohman, Edith Jurgens, Jane Langley and Jessie Kenyon of Newport; Alice and Mary Coggeshall, Anna and Sarah Sisson, Elizabeth Anthony, Gladys Downey, Alice and Margaret Conway and their brother, Frank J. Conway, of Portsmouth; Donald Chace of Jacksonville, N. Y., and Nellie Peabody of Middletown. Miss Mary Lohman, Miss Jane Langley, Miss Alice and Mary Coggeshall, Miss Edith Jurgens and Miss Anna Sisson gave piano solos during the afternoon.

The committees appointed by St. Paul's Guild to assist in the annual lawn party by the Ladies' Association of St. Paul's Church are as follows: Music, Mrs. Berton W. Storrs, Miss Harriet Frances Stanford; fancy work, Mrs. May Malone, Mrs. Ralph H. Anthony, Mrs. Frank Dyer; lemonade, Mrs. William Lawrence, Miss Sanford; flowers, Mrs. Archibald Sherman; home-made candy, Mrs. Frederick Webb, Miss Lillian Wheeler.

The regular meeting of St. Mary's Guild was held Wednesday with a good attendance. The resignation as vice president of Mrs. Charles Sumner Sisson was received and accepted with regret. Mrs. John O. C. Peckham was elected to fill the vacancy.

Misses Ethel Smith, Helen Coughlin and Sadie Appleby have gone to Newport to spend a few weeks.

Mr. Louis Darling has started on his return to Anderson, Ind., stopping on his way at New York, where he will spend several days. Mrs. Darling will remain longer.

Miss Julia Harrington is guest of Miss Margaret Powers at Island Park for the summer.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eldredge and their son have returned to Philadelphia.

The town was awakened at sunrise Fourth of July morning by the ringing of the Methodist Episcopal Church bell by the sexton, Mr. Benjamin F. Pierce, and later that of St. Paul's joined in. They harmonized well and as it was about all the celebration there was in the town, everything being unusually quiet, without even the customary quota of fireworks, it was welcomed.

Mrs. John Hedly, formerly Miss Annie Thomas, only daughter of the late Charles G. Thomas, was taken so ill Tuesday that she was carried to the hospital in the night. Since the death of her husband she has lived much of the time in Fall River and was taken sick there with some form of liver trouble.

Misses Annie and Jennie Ironside of Middleboro, Mass., and Mrs. West of Fall River are guests of Mrs. Fred Duckworth.

Mrs. Arthur L. Fish of Dorchester is guest of Mr. Lawrence F. Fish and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Gray and their two children, who are spending the summer at Prudence Island, have been guests of Mrs. Gray's [illegible] Mr. Henry S. Douglas.

Fourth of July morning steamer Islander left Humphrey's wharf for an all-day excursion to Seaconnet and return. A large number of Portsmouth people took advantage of the opportunity to enjoy a shore dinner and the sea air. They left the Point on their return at 3 o'clock and report a satisfactory dinner and a pleasant sail.

FORGOTTEN ORDINANCES.

[Civic League Bulletin.]

Every effort on the part of the city officials to secure a more careful and rigid enforcement of city ordinances is surely a cause for thanksgiving among all law-abiding citizens. But what is needed quite as much in our own city is that sense of respect for law and obedience to its demands which shall make every individual fully alive to his own responsibility in keeping the city's rules and regulations. Many of the existing ordinances are unfortunately customs "more honored in the breach than the observance."

When one sees sailors—by their uniforms plainly shown to be members of our own navy—sitting on a bench in a park enjoying a bag of peanuts and carelessly dropping all the shells on the ground under the bench, perhaps he may say in excuse that the men are ignorant of the Newport law about throwing litter in public places. What excuse can he offer for the number of civilians who wait for the street cars on the City Hall coping and deliberately deposit fruit skins, candy papers, cigarette boxes, etc., on the walk at their feet? Let the observer walk down Broadway or Thames street and he will see more than one man violating the spitting-on-the-sidewalk ordinance, in spite of the signs placed in conspicuous places. Not ignorance but sheer careless indifference to law and order is the only explanation possible.

And so on through a long list of other ordinances. The skaters on the sidewalks, the advertising distributors, the merchants who keep food supplies exposed for sale uncovered from dirt and flies—why do they all wait to be complained of and warned by the police authority, and not show some slight degree of civic pride or even self-respect in keeping the laws made for the good of their city and its dwellers? Let the public sense be quickened and the laws not allowed to pass out of remembrance but jealously cherished and upheld!

MERITS OF WHITE BREAD.

[New York Evening Post.]

The battle of the breads has been going on in France, where the merits of white bread recently scored a victory over the brown or graham bread. The latter, adopted in 1903 for the army, has now been replaced by a white bread ration. The daily portion of 26 ounces of white bread has been reduced to 23 ounces, but the white flour is estimated to contain one sixth more of nutritive substances than the graham. Other advantages claimed for white bread are that it absorbs liquids more freely, thus facilitating the amalgamation of saliva and gastric juice. The white bread in turn is more completely assimilated than the brown, whose larger proportion of mineral salts thus goes for nothing. Economically the brown bread is at a disadvantage since the bran is contains can be used as a food for animals more profitably than for man. A commission appointed by the French minister of war sums up its findings in the statement that the growing use of white bread among civilized people is founded upon "the experience of millions a million times repeated."

TALE OF A STAMP.

[With apologies to Newton Newkirk.]

I'm a stamp—a postage stamp—
A two-cent'er!
I make the government
A profit
Of $62,000,000 a year.
Some velvet, eh!
Don't want to brag,
But I was never
Licked,
Except once;
By a gentleman, too;
He put me on an envelope—
Perfumed, pink, square;
I've been stuck on it.
Ever since;
He dropped us—
Through a slot in a dark box;
But we were rescued,
A mail clerk hit me an awful
Smash with a hammer;
It left my face black and blue;
Then I went on a long Journey.
When we arrived—
The pink envelope and I—
We were presented
To a perfect love
Of a girl,
Say, she's a dream!
Well, she mutilated
The pink envelope and me
With a hair pin;
Then she read inside,
I never saw a girl blush
So beautifully!
Say, she kissed me.
Oh, you little godlets!
We—
The pink envelope and I—
Are now nestling snugly
In her bosom;
We can hear her heart throb;
When it goes fastest
She takes us out
And kisses me.
Oh, say
This is great!
I'm glad
I'm a stamp—
A two cent'er,
Even if
The One Cent
Letter Postage Association
Is after my scalp.

WEAR HUB RUBBERS This Winter.

For the Tailor-Made Girl.

This tailored hat of blue milan acco mpanies a frock of blue whipcord. The frock is made on the simplest lines and is accompanied by a black patent leather belt and a cool, turned down collar of heavy crochet lace. The hat has a pleating of blue ribbon around the crown and a quill in a gray tone dashed with orange. Buttoned boots of tan calf and cream silk gloves complete a practical cos-tume.

THE SONG OF THE ORANGE PEEL.

[Tit-Bits.]

Like a bar of the beaten gold
I gleam in the summer sun;
I am little, I know, but think I can throw
A man that will weigh a ton.
I send out no challenges bold,
I blow me no vaunting horn,
But foolish is he who treadeth on me;
He'll wish he had never been born.

Like the flower of the field, vain man
Goeth forth at the break of day;
But when he doth feel my grip on his heel
Like the stubble he fadeth away.
For I lift him high in the air,
With his heels where his head ought to be;
With a down-coming crash he fails like a flash,
And I know he's clean gone upon me.

I am much scorned by haughty mankind;
I am modest and meek, if you will;
Though my talents are few, yet the work that I do
Has often taxed medical skill.
I'm a blood-red Republican born
And a Nihilist fearless I be;
Though the head wear a crown, I would bring its pride down
If it set its proud heel upon me.

"Why do you insist on giving that man twice as much as he asked for his vegetables?"

"Because," replied Mr. Whimmer, "I have tried gardening myself, and when a man has managed to get past cutworms, drouth and all the rest of the perils and actually produces a head of cabbage and a bunch of beets, I want to do something to show my respect for him."—[Washington Star.

TEN PAGES.

THE DEMOCRATIC CHANCES.

There are not enough straight Democratic states to afford the candidate of that party any hope of success. He must carry several of the doubtful or Republican states in order to win. Before silverism split the Democratic party it used to have fully its fair share of these. Since Bryan rent his party with the free-silver issue it has carried none of them. After its victory of 1892, in which Cleveland captured several Republican states, the Democratic party won nothing until 1910, except in an occasional local contest.

Wilson has the great advantage of breaking into the political arena only within the last two years. Therefore he is not associated in any way with the bitter fights over Clevelandism and Bryanism, sound money and cheap money. He appears to be the one man whom both ends of the Democratic party can support. He ought to hold his own state, which he carried two years ago by the unprecedented majority of 50,000. New Jersey has been a Republican state for many years. Marshall ought to win in Indiana, which he carried by 14,000 the same year that it voted for Taft by 10,000.

The states which are certainly or almost certainly Democratic have 166 electoral votes. The number necessary to elect is 242. Adding to the solid South, Missouri and Oklahoma the states of Indiana and New Jersey and we have 295 electoral votes, with 47 more needed. New York alone has 45, and with the cheap-money issue out of the way is a close state. If Wilson could carry that he would need only two more votes from the eight of Maryland, the seven of Connecticut, the three of Delaware and the three of Arizona, in all of which the Democrats have rather better than an even chance.

If Roosevelt can take off any considerable Republican vote Wilson's election would be certain. If Roosevelt should not run, would progressive Republicans vote for Wilson? Democrats believe they would and two of the most prominent Republican papers, the New York Tribune and the Philadelphia Press, seem to think so. That would give Wilson some of the close states. Probably the party which can control New York will carry the election, and if either Roosevelt or Wilson can cut much into the usual Republican vote it will elect the Democratic ticket.

RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL CO-OPERATION.

The Men and Religion movement, which has had much success in this country during the past year or two, has astonished many interested along religious and social lines by the ability shown to bring into harmony phases of these two kinds of work which hitherto had been found somewhat if not quite discordant. One of its campaign mottoes has been "To place the religious emphasis upon social service and the social emphasis upon religious work." Great doubt was expressed at the beginning if anything like such a union as that could be realized, but the history of the movement has shown that it has been done admirably and effectively. The religious and the social workers have labored side by side and there has been no discordant element, but the utmost harmony, so that it has been practically impossible to perceive any line of separation between the two bodies. It has been realized that all were striving for the same ultimate results and in the same great interest, and without any definite agreement to agree there has been entire consonance of effort and no attempt to emphasize either the religious or the social side above the other, but an endeavor to make them of equal importance.

The success of the movement in arousing men to a new or a renewed interest in religious work, with all which that implies of allied interests, has been so great that even the doubters who were by no means few at the beginning have disappeared for the most part. It has been practical in its nature, including in its field of effort almost every recognized method of accomplishing the good of the individual and of the masses, civic betterment and municipal improvement. It has embraced work which has not heretofore been considered religious in its nature, but is now recognized as such because it has a bearing on the welfare of the people. Thus the purely personal element of religious experience and philanthropic effort for the good of others, or the social element, are emphasized and lead to the inclusion within the field of the movement of all which benefits mankind and advances civilization and civic righteousness. It is in this respect that it differs from other movements and because of this it has been so successful.

FINANCIAL FRAUDS.

Seventy-seven million dollars in one year is a tremendous sum for the people of the United States to lose in fraudulent investment enterprises and yet the figures cannot be doubted, being given out by the Postoffice Department. So completely fictitious were these financial enterprises that in most cases not a dollar was paid in dividends to the investors and there were no legitimate earnings from which anything could be paid. The department is engaged in unceasing warfare upon companies or individuals of this sort, because much if not most of the work of defrauding the people is done through the mails and Uncle Sam is always alert to keep these safe and free from such uses. In this work every year a large number of these wild-cat schemes are run down, the offices raided and closed, prosecutions made and convictions secured where possible. In few instances, however, do the investors ever receive a single cent of return for the money they have placed in the hands of these schemers, with the confident hope that in a few months they would become rich and independent through the rewards promised.

This kind of robbery has gained such proportions and is claiming so many victims that the states are seeking to protect from it those who live within their borders. Some commonwealths have already placed safeguards about the unwary investor by requiring the licensing of stock brokers and agents, and in this way a full investigation is made of the business and the methods employed before a license is granted and careful attention is paid to the methods pursued after the permit is given. Other states have similar laws under consideration and the whole country is awaking to a realization of the need of united action to protect the people against money sharks and fake promoters of investment schemes. The immense loss to individuals is sufficient to demand that steps be taken to secure a reduction in this amount practically handed over to these fraudulent schemers without return.

The case with which the public can be made to believe even the most preposterous claims regarding the profits which can be made by the investment of a small sum would be almost past belief if it were not so patent to any who are observant of the methods employed by these fake promoters and the results of their efforts to fool the people. Announcements that hundreds of thousands of dollars can be earned from an investment of a few hundreds will bring letters from multitudes of credulous persons, eager to invest their small savings with the expectation and belief that they will reap the rich harvest promised. It has often been said that the American people like to be fooled and there is no way in which this liking seems to be more fully displayed than in connection with the investment of money. Though the victims of fake promoters appear to believe they will receive all that is promised, the claims are so unreasonable in many cases that it does not seem possible that such a thought could be entertained by persons of sound mind. Yet the facts show that many people of good judgment in other things lose their reason when money investments are considered.

While the Postoffice department is extremely vigilant in protecting the people against such frauds it cannot proceed until it has full evidence to warrant the seizure of mail and the punishment of those conducting the scheme, and in many cases by that time the men have disappeared, carrying with them small fortunes made up largely of the sole earnings of credulous victims. Some times they are daring enough to undertake similar schemes in other parts of the country and in such cases they are often discovered by the postoffice authorities and action taken upon old evidence, without waiting for new, and thus the conspirators are caught and punished severely. The government does all it can to protect victims of financial frauds but the states must do something also, by passing laws which will reduce the ease with which business of this sort can be done. In addition, the people themselves ought to understand by this time, with all the publicity given to these frauds, that they should be cautious about investments and not expect to grow rich quickly on an expenditure of a few hundred dollars.

Not because the Department of Commerce and Labor is inclined to be lax in the enforcement of its rules, but because the manufacturers are unable to turn out enough life boats to meet the demand, Superintendent Uhler of the bureau of steam navigation has issued an order extending the time limit within which compliance must be made with the new regulations as to lifeboat and life raft equipment. Vessels which comply with the orders to the extent of 50 per cent of their equipment before July 31 will have until September 30 to complete the work.

Colonel Roosevelt insists that his third party still exists, and is trying to persuade Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver to be his running mate on the ticket. To the general observer at this distance there is little "party" left, Colonel Roosevelt standing practically alone on the deck of the deserted ship.

The high cost of living does not check the demand of Americans for costly jewels. During the past year gems valued at $41,000,000 were imported into this country and paid duty. There were undoubtedly others which escaped the eyes of custom house officials.

Roosevelt says that in the recent Republican national convention Taft had but 70 votes to which he was "morally entitled." This conclusion is reached after a process of elimination for various causes. Why did not the colonel contest all these seats?

It was a glorious Fourth—more glorious because there were fewer accidents and a more generally safe and sane observance of the holiday. The day of cannon crackers has gone.

The American flag with 48 stars was officially thrown to the breeze Thursday. Few flags had the requisite number of stars, but there were more than the usual number flying.

Newport's "new" beach was "opened" satisfactorily. The city and the association have done a good thing transforming the place in so short a time. Energetic work counts.

Newport was fortunate in having the opportunity to hear Mr. Henry Clews. The revival of the old custom of a Fourth of July oration is generally commended.

We did not miss the parade. There were plenty of other attractions.

LESSONS OF A CENTURY-OLD WAR.

[New York Tribune.]

Slight as may be the popular interest in the centenary of the War of 1812, there are some lessons of that struggle which are pertinent to the present time and which it is desirable to recall. We have said that the war was not popular and was entered upon reluctantly. Yet it was inevitable, and that was because two things, either of which would have been sufficient to avert it, were lacking.

One of these was international law. America complained that Great Britain interfered with her trade with France and impressed her naturalized—and sometimes her native—citizens into the British navy. There were then no international agreements for the regulation of such matters, and so Great Britain acted according to her old customs and according to the exigencies of her desperate struggle with France. Neither was there then any provision for arbitration. Had there been international agreements, such as there are now, and had there been an arbitration treaty such as that which President Taft strove to secure the adoption of last year, there would have been no war. Great Britain would have kept the law and avoided offence; or, if she had given offence, satisfaction would have been sought by judicial rather than military action.

The other thing which was lacking was American military power on land and sea. Our army consisted of only a few thousand ill-trained militia and our navy of not a single battleship and only seven frigates or cruisers and a few sloops. No wonder that Great Britain regarded our military forces as negligible factors. If we had possessed a well trained army and a reasonably strong navy there would probably have been no war. Great Britain would have respected our power. And the irony of it was that it was in the name and for the sake of peace that our army had been disbanded and our navy neglected. The very policy which was supposed to make for peace really made for war. Washington's creed was that preparation for war was the best guarantee of peace. Jefferson reversed it and strove to maintain peace by being unprepared for war. The catastrophe of a hundred years ago was an illuminating and convincing commentary on those policies.

FRUIT FARMING.

[Boston Transcript.]

The boomers of the Northwest are fond of circulating stories about the prices that fruit land brings in that section, sometimes as high as $3,000 or $4,000 an acre, which are justified by the returns. But evidently we do not need to go so far for at least a partial parallel. Frank Sanborn, in his weekly letter, tells of an Irish-American farmer, whom he has discovered in his rambles about Concord, the extent of whose holdings is 13 acres. The most of this is given up to asparagus, but just now it is the strawberry portion that has been attracting attention. For a week past, or more, he has been sending 100 crates a day or 3,200 boxes to the Boston market, none of which yield him less than 10 cents a box, and the season is not half over. It is estimated that he will get a net return of $3,000 from five acres, and their value as revenue producers can easily be calculated. The man who knows how can do large things with 13 acres of good ground or even less.

CANDLES THAT GROW.

[Tit-Bits.]

Seeds of two remarkable trees have recently come to the United States plant bureau through the hands of the agricultural explorers. Both of them might be called light bearers, though in ways somewhat different.

One of them is the "pili" nut tree, which grows in the southern part of the island of Luzon, and nowhere else in the Philippines. It is quite a large tree, and its seed is described as extraordinarily rich in flavor. All the Americans in the Philippines think it the finest nut grown. When the nuts are roasted, if a lighted match be touched to one of them, it will burn like a lamp, so rich is it in oil.

The other tree is a native of the Isthmus of Panama, and is one of the most remarkable trees of the tropics. It is known as the "candle tree," most appropriately, inasmuch as its aspect, when its fruits are ripe, is that of a tree whose branches are covered with candles, much after the fashion of a Christmas tree.

SCHOOLS OF JOURNALISM.

[Boston Transcript.]

Thomas Hardy has breathed a pathetic lament over the degeneracy of modern newspaper English, in the American press in particular. Still we may make bold to doubt whether he would be able to conduct a newspaper that would meet the tastes and the needs of the public better than the leading journals of today even if he had the writing of the whole of it. But without stopping to argue with him either as to premise or conclusion, and giving his dictum the full benefit of the doubt, we are now urged to expect that the profession will in a very few years rise superior to criticism on this point through the agencies of the new journalistic schools; and yet, contrary to the most impressive assurances, doubts will sometimes arise.

Several years ago a school of journalism was added to the departments of Missouri University, and brilliant results were predicted for it. Perhaps the public has not been kept in close touch with its methods or what they produced, but a glimpse of the character of the training given was afforded recently in an address by the dean of that school before the National Press Club. He spoke with confidence of the new institution and what it was accomplishing; declared that it was no longer an experiment, but had been adopted in 21 universities with a total of 2,000 students, certainly a leaven that ought to work a transforming influence if it is all that is claimed for it.

But deans should be careful of the ideas that they put forth and the terms in which they clothe them. In this association they are supposed to be directing a reforming service for a noble and practical calling. In this instance the speaker selected for consideration the journalistic exemplars of the Old and New Testaments and proceeded swimmingly for a time, giving Moses due credit as one of the great editors, but it must have been a shock to his hearers when he referred to St. Luke as a crackerjack reporter. Such a term in such a connection might pass in the Outlook—were the copy prepared by the contributing editor—but in the majority of family newspapers it would undergo summary blue penciling. He called Matthew's narrative a good Associated Press story, without color or bias, that would be acceptable to Democratic and Republican sheets alike, but not reflecting any of the crackerjack qualities of the other.

The Bible is the most dependable foundation upon which one striving to excel in pure and expressive English can build. Especially is this true of the King James version of it. In poetry, narrative, drama, history, prophecy, it stands above all rivals. It has been the good fortune of not a few great writers and speakers that it was about the only source of inspiration in their formative years. But it was necessary that they should be imbued with its spirit to the extent of appreciating its style. It must be subjectively studied to produce the desired result. Directing the attention of the student objectively to its crackerjack features is not likely to have an impressive effect. We do not believe that Dr. Talcott Williams makes such a use of it. Schools of journalism may be no longer an experiment, as the Missouri dean claims, but they are still under close scrutiny, and reference by their instructors to the saints of the calendar as crackerjacks, raises doubts.

ROMANTIC ORIGIN OF THE PEKINESE DOG.

[Strand.]

Pekinese dogs are the product of that palace life in Pekin which would seem now to be passing forever into the limbo of forgotten things, so that the present is surely an appropriate time for touching briefly on the history and character of the dog which has leapt into favor in the past few years in an extraordinary meteoric manner.

In 1860, the summer palace of Pekin was sacked by European soldiers, the first shaking-off of that extraordinary fabric of Eastern rule which we now see laid in the dust. Amongst the loot were eight of the imperial dogs, which had hitherto never been allowed outside the confines of the palace, save under penalties that included death in various fashions, such as stoning or being cut into a thousand pieces, either of which methods had not unnaturally been found sufficiently drastic to discourage dog-stealing.

The dogs looted in 1860 are persistently described as being five in number, but there must have been eight at least. They were found hidden in the apartments of the emperor's aunt, an unfortunate lady who committed suicide on the approach of the soldiers. One was given to Queen Victoria, who had its portrait painted by Landseer; one pair became the property of the late Duke of Richmond and Gordon, and another pair were acquired by Admiral Lord John Hay. Admiral Oliver Jones, (then captain) brought home one further dog, and a pair were secured by another officer, from which was bred a puppy that lived in England nearly 17 years.

From these eight priceless creatures were bred all the Pekinese that England could boast of for another generation, and, remaining in few hands, they continued comparatively unknown. At length, however, a few were obtained from the palace by methods into which it would be impertinent to inquire, but it seems clear that they had begun life as the personal pets of the late dowager empress, known as "Old Buddha." How jealously watched they were is shown by the fact that at the latter siege of Pekin, when the foreign embassies were in such great danger and were believed even to have fallen, the palace dogs were removed in the first palankeen which departed from Sin-gan-fu as the foreigners entered the Forbidden City.

THE GERMAN NAVY IN 1912.

[Commodore W. H. Beehler, in the Century.]

The German naval program provides that the navy shall consist of 38 battleships, 20 large armored cruisers and 38 cruisers, to be in active service by 1917. All these ships are to be modern in every respect, as no vessel over 20 years old is considered efficient, and such must be replaced by a new ship. As the eight battleships still building will be completed within a year the prescribed strength of 38 will have been attained; but there is agitation in the Reichstag for an enlarged program, consisting of 58 battleships and other ships in proportion, which seems likely to be adopted.

The German navy has 138 destroyers, ranging from 300 to 680 tons, and the law provides for building 12 torpedo destroyers annually. There are 12 submarines, and the Reichstag appropriated $3,760,000 last year for additional submarines.

SHIPPING DAY-OLD CHICKS.

[Farm and Fireside.]

A great many people are surprised to hear that chicks, before they are fairly dried off, can be safely sent by express from 200 to 1,000 miles and reach their destination alive and in good condition. But such is the case, and today the shipping of day-old chicks is a great business, thousands and thousands of the little chicks being shipped all over the world during the hatching season.

Some people do not know that a chick, which escapes from the shell in which it has been a prisoner for three weeks, will stand a lot of abuse and live, provided you are not too harsh with it. Nature has provided a supply of nourishment for the little fellow in the form of the yolk of the egg, from which it is hatched. The chick comes from the shell with the undigested yolk yet in its body, and this furnishes all the food that the chick needs for the first 48 hours of its life. When the little chicks are packed away for several hours during shipment, they continue to gain strength and are much better off than if they were exposed to the sudden changes of running in and out of the hover of the brooder. And these are the reasons why so many are safely sent.

After the chicks are hatched and nicely dried off they are ready for shipment. I have found baskets to be excellent for shipping the little fellows in small lots of from 12 to 60. These baskets should be strong and low. About four inches is the proper height. I line the basket well with burlap. Cut clover and chaff are placed in the bottom. The chicks are then put in and a cover of burlap sewed over the top of the basket. A label, "LIVE CHICKS," is sewed on in a conspicuous place and they are ready for shipment. I like baskets best, for they are light and easily handled. Manufacturers can supply you with any sized basket you wish.

If you prefer to ship in boxes, make them four inches high, of light material, and line them the way mentioned for the basket. If any great number are to be shipped, the chicks can be placed in boxes containing several decks. Don't feed them anything for the journey. It is injurious to them.

The shipping of day-old chicks has come to stay. Buying young chicks will save you a lot of trouble and money, too. Send your orders early and don't expect to have your chicks shipped the day after you order them. You know you cannot get them until after they are hatched.

DISTRICT COURT CASES.

Colored Man Bound Over for Assault and Portsmouth Foreman Held for Embezzlement.

In the district court this morning James H. Smith (colored) was found probably guilty of assaulting Michael Harrington with a dangerous weapon—to wit, a razor—and was bound over to the grand jury in October. The assault was committed, it was alleged, in a Long Wharf poolroom about 1 o'clock Saturday night, June 29. Harrington, who now carries a gash in his cheek about six inches long, testified that he did not know Smith before the night of the affair. Some words were passed when they met in the poolroom, but Harrington could not recall what they were. He heard Smith say "Fear me," and something else, and the next thing he knew he was cut and friends were hurrying him in a cab to a doctor's office. There will always be a scar on his cheek. No defense was put in at this time. Mr. F. F. Nolan appeared for the defendant and City Solicitor Sullivan for the prosecution.

John Reinberg of Portsmouth, boss farmer for Colonel Reginald Norman, was arrested by Constable Corcoran Sunday afternoon and arraigned before Clerk George H. Kelley of the district court later, where he pleaded not guilty to a warrant charging embezzlement. It is charged that Reinberg has been dishonest in the matter of using money given him for specific purposes by his employer. Being without friends to furnish bail, he was committed to the Newport County jail to await the trial of his case, July 9.

A FISH LULL.

There is a sort of lull in the fish report today. Captain Alex Rugen of schooner Tecumseh brought in 500 barrels of good-looking mackerel this morning and about five of handsome scup. The fishermen thought hey had lost all the mackerel this morning, but succeeded in saving quite a few. C. A. Easterbrooks also had some good-sized scup Thursday. A few swakfish are coming in. Block Island had 70 to 80 barrels of mackerel today.

In the afternoon a series of games and sports were run off and the boys did all they could to be good hosts.

THE CINCINNATI CELEBRATES.

Observes the Day in Accordance With Established Custom.

Business Session, Commemorative Exercises and Banquet With the Usual Toasts.

The annual meeting of the Society of the Cincinnati for the State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantations was held in this city Thursday with a business meeting and exercises commemorative of the Declaration of Independence in the old State House and the annual dinner at the Casino Club rooms.

The business session was held in the morning in the Representatives' chamber, with a good attendance of members. Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner presided. The usual reports were read and a number of resolutions adopted, one requesting the standing committee to take measures to provide for an increase in the respect shown for the American flag, another protesting against the proposed destruction of the Constellation and requesting the Secretary of the Navy to issue orders to have the vessel returned to Narragansett bay, "a fitting monument to the American navy in the waters that mark its birthplace."

The following officers were elected:

President—Asa Bird Gardiner.

Vice President—George Washington Almy.

Secretary—Charles L. F. Robinson.

Treasurer—Hazard Stevens.

Assistant Secretary—William Paine Sheffield.

Assistant Treasurer—Thomas Arnold Peirce.

Alternates—Charles Howard Russell, Oliver Hazard Perry, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Sylvanus Albert Reed, Rt. Rev. Sidney C. Partridge.

Members of General Greene Memorial Association—Thomas A. Peirce, in place of Hazard Stevens, resigned; William Paine Sheffield, in place of William Watts Sherman, deceased.

At noon the members took carriages and were driven to "The Breakwater," the residence of former Governor Charles Warren Lippitt, near Bailey's beach, where luncheon was served, afterwards going over the Ocean drive and returning to the State House.

The exercises in the afternoon were open to the public and were well attended. The old representatives' chamber was decorated with American flags and that of the Cincinnati, while over the desk was draped a flag carried in the Civil war by Company H, Thirty-first New York regiment, of which Colonel Gardiner was an officer.

The members marched into the hall by twos, the flag of the society being carried by Master Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., who was accompanied by Masters Charles Warren Lippitt, Jr., and Caldwell Colt Robinson, sons of members who had been introduced at its business meeting.

Colonel Gardiner presided and made a short address of welcome. The Declaration of Independence was read by George Washington Greene Carpenter of Providence, Lieutenant Governor Zenas W. Bliss spoke briefly in behalf of the state and Augutus Franklin Arnold sang "The Sword of Bunker Hill," to an accompaniment by Albert Ross Parsons. The address was by Rear Admiral French E. Chadwick, U. S. N. (retired), who spoke interestingly on "The American Navy in the Revolution."

"America" was sung by the audience, to the new music adopted by the Society of the Cincinnati, and the exercises were concluded with the benediction by Rt. Rev. Sidney Catlin Partridge, D. D., Bishop of Kansas.

The general reception committee consisted of Messrs. Edward Wilkinson Rogers, Robert Taylor Warren and Elisha Dyer.

At the annual dinner at the Casino Club rooms, Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner presided and responses were made to toasts as follows: Lieutenant Governor Zenas W. Bliss to "The State of Rhode Island and Providence Plantation;" General Hazard Stevens, to "The Order of the Cincinnati, instituted by the officers of the War of the Revolution;" Brigadier General Charles L. Davis, U. S. A., to "The American Army;" Captain William L. Rodgers, U. S. N., to "The American Navy;" Rev. Roderick Terry, D. D., to "The American Flag, the emblem of liberty throughout the world;" Rev. Daniel Goodwin, D. D., to "The Ever-Glorious Fourth of July, 1776;" Albert Ross Parsons, to "The Battle of Rhode Island, August 29, 1778;" Charles Warren Lippitt, to "The Continental Line of the Revolution;" Thomas Allen Genckes, to "The Patriotic Societies of America;" Colonel Frank P. King, to "The Militia and Independent Companies of the United States." The toasts to the memory of General George Washington and General Nathaniel Greene were as usual drunk in silence.

BIG TRAVEL ON THE ISLAND.

The Bay State and Providence Roads Run Double and Triple-Headers All Day Thursday.

The Bay State Company had a big business on the island all day Thursday, running double-headers and at times triple-headers and calling out the box cars for extra work. The line carried thousands of people during the day, and it is slow work determining just how many. Island park had an attendance of 2,000 or 3,000, dancing, bathing and general lounging along shore being the attraction. Many who dropped at the park later came to Newport or stopped at the park on their return. The Providence road also had big travel, running double and triple-headers.

The two roads brought a host of people to town, while the City of Lowell had a crowd from New London and the river steamers all brought down large numbers. There was also quite a little traveling out of the city, for while so many strangers were anxious to come here there were those who were just as anxious to go to some other place of their particular choice.

It was a long day's work for the street car men, all hands being on duty from early morning until midnight. There was no time off for meals, and what the men had to eat and drink was taken "on the fly" from food depots which had been established.

DONE BY NEWPORTERS.

Beach Management Congratulated by Mr. Titus on the Results Accomplished.

The following letter regarding the changes at the beach and the results accomplished seems entirely self-explanatory:

Col. J. H. Wotherell, President Newport Beach Association, Newport.

My Dear Sir: I take great pleasure in expressing to you my hearty congratulations on the highly successful results which the rare good judgment and untiring efforts of your board of management have accomplished. At last it has been demonstrated that our beach can be made one of Newport's greatest assets without in the least offending, either by the character of its attractions or by the character of those whom it attracts, the fine sensibilities of the most exacting; moreover, these things can be done by Newport men, and it is not necessary to go abroad to find men who can do things.

Newport has wonderful possibilities and men who are capable of developing them, if only they are given the support which is due from those who are not able to accomplish things themselves. I trust your successful accomplishment will bring about a change of attitude of many people who obstruct the progress of our city and keep Newport so far away from the prominence which her natural physical advantages would allow her to claim.

I am, Sincerely yours,
H. A. Titus.

Newport, July 4, 1912.

MANY FIRES BUT LITTLE LOSS.

Worst Was on a Roof in "Smithville" and the Beach Had Two Small Blazes.

Newport, like other cities, had its quota of Fourth of July fires, but was fortunate enough to escape without much loss. On the whole, considering the dry weather, there were perhaps not so many calls for the services of the department as might have been expected.

The most serious fire of the day was that which occasioned the striking of box 21, shortly after noon. The location was at 5 Smith court, off Poplar street, one of the numerous wooden tenement houses known as "Smithville," adjacent to the railroad tracks. Several children playing in the court saw the fire on the roof and their cries attracted the attention of Chester Peckham, who turned in an alarm.

When the firemen arrived the brisk wind had stirred up a lively blaze among the dry shingles and the entire south slope of the roof seemed on fire. The men had a hard half-hour's work and did not extinguish the last smouldering spark until practically every shingle and the gutter had been removed.

The house contains two tenements, but only the lower half was occupied, by Charles Gaines, and he suffered no loss, as the fire did not go beyond the shingles and no water was used in extinguishing the blaze. It is owned by Annie S. Randall, one of the heirs of the late Samuel Smith, and was insured in the Northern & New York Insurance Company, the loss being adjusted this morning through the company's agent, Edward L. Spencer.

The blaze may have been started by firecrackers, or may have originated from a spark from a passing locomotive. There have been several roof fires in this locality in the past, and they have come not on a holiday, but on days when there are no fire crackers. It is probable that a spark from a locomotive was responsible for this one.

In the morning the old beach donkey cart which with its wide-tired wheels had been loaded with 500 feet of fire hose, pipe, wrench and spanners, was hauled across the road to the hydrant and left where it could be seen by all and was ready to stretch a line of hose in either direction. The hurried development of the beach plant had not permitted provision for any other alarm than the simple cry of "fire," but the men had had a practice drill.

Shortly after 6:30 the advisability of the preparation was shown when half a dozen alarms from discovered a fire in the rear of the dance hall. The cry was raised and the men laid the hose. They soon had a good stream of water playing on the flames and extinguished them. Notice was telephoned to the city and the regular firemen came, but were not needed. In the hurly-burly on the board walk, where most of the people were, the cry of fire was not heard and many of the attendants did not know there was one until it was over.

The paint on the dance hall was not scorched, though the blaze was almost under the rear end. When the structure was hurriedly made ready for use Wednesday evening the rear doors were opened and all the litter was thrown out. It was in this, with adjoining stacks of lumber, that the fire started, probably from a cigarette. There were about the beach similar places which invited fire, for in the rush to make ready for the crowds and with the construction still incomplete it was only possible to brush things off traveled ways.

The other fires were only slight in character and required merely a still alarm, and in some cases none. The complete fire record since The News last went to press, Wednesday afternoon, is as follows:

July 3, 8:11 P. M.—Still, for a few shingles on the roof of 42 Thames street; cause, firecrackers.

July 4, 12:06 P. M.—Box 12. Roof fire in "Smithville," off Poplar street; cause, firecrackers or sparks from locomotive.

1:35 P. M.—Still. Roof of Assistant Engineer Bowler's woodshed on Broadway; cause, firecrackers.

2:30 P. M.—No alarm. Newport Beach; painters' clothing and rubbish back of merry-go-round; extinguished by Charles Tisdale and William J. Easton; spontaneous combustion.

6:38 P. M.—Still. Newport Beach; litter and lumber back of dance hall; firecrackers or cigarette.

8:11 P. M.—Still. Shingles on roof of Charles H. Taber's house on Lincoln street; cause, spent rocket.

Philip Dowling put out a small roof fire at the corner of Church and Spring streets in the evening, and Harbor Master Shea extinguished a fire in a spile on Bowen's wharf.

NOT A HOLIDAY FOR THE POLICE.

Entire Force Kept Busy, Though There Was Only One "War"—Stolen Sloop Identified Here.

The police—all the police—had a very busy day on the Fourth, but there was nothing serious except one "war" on West Broadway and vicinity. This began about 6 p. m., the combatants being colored farm hands from out of town and colored Cape Verdeans. The battle was renewed on Spruce street, where most of the damage was done.

It was a mixed-up affair, in which several men were more or less injured and one was cut so that he was taken to the hospital for treatment. Out of the melee the police gathered in one Middletown man for carrying a revolver, a concealed weapon, and there were two arrests for fighting. A piece of joist with nails in it, one of the weapons used, is at the station.

At the station this morning one man for carrying a concealed weapon paid $23.60, one for assault paid $13.60 and one for assault with a knife was bound over in $500 for trial July 12. A man for drunkenness paid $4.60, he was a left-over from the New London excursion.

About 6 o'clock Thursday Louis Roach, a fireman from the Training Station, hit the south window of the Enterprise Clothing store and put it out of commission completely. He also put himself out of commission, his right hand being badly cut. A hospital attendant rendered first aid to the injured man, who was taken to a doctor's office and had his hand dressed. Then he was turned over to the navy. He was trying to hit another sailor when he hit the window.

L. Vilaneco from the Florida was struck on the head by another sailor, and when the police found him the hospital seemed to be the proper place for him and he was sent there. The patrol was sent to Bath road to quell a disturbance which was not found, and generally it was a day of work and rumors, but nothing serious.

The Hamburg, a little racing sloop, finished bright, is at the New York Yacht Club pier, waiting to return home to New York. She was discovered Thursday in the harbor by Mr. Hans Goldsmith, a former owner, and a guest on Mr. Marshall's yacht San Toy. He notified the police and Inspector Tobin took the sloop to the San Toy. There was no one on board. The port shroud turn-buckles were broken as if she had side-swiped something and one of the cabin doors was broken. The tender was with the boat and the mystery was how those who stole the boat escaped.

This was easily settled when a report from the captain of a coal barge discharging at Brown & Howard's wharf was heard. It was last Sunday morning that this strange-looking craft was found at anchor just off the barge. There were two soldiers in uniform on board and one was handcuffed. The soldiers asked the captain of the barge to take them ashore and he did so. This explains when and how the sloop came here and why the tender was at the stern. It looks like a case of a prisoner escaping, perhaps with a comrade, from some fort near New York, for the Hamburg was missed from her moorings a week or so ago. The sloop is now found, but the two soldiers are missing.

Keeper Schoeneman of the breakwater light had his skiff, oars and rowlocks stolen recently. It was practically certain that some sailor had stolen the boat to reach his ship. It was found ashore after being abandoned and Mr. Schoeneman was notified.

O'SHAUNESSY CASE DISMISSED.

Democratic National Committee Claims It Has No Jurisdiction Over Primary.

The Democratic national committee, at its meeting Wednesday in Baltimore, dismissed the protest of Congressman George E. O'Shaunessy, filed with it, against the seating of George W. Greene, as a member of the committee. The reason given was that it had no jurisdiction in the case and that therefore it could not recognize the protest. The action of the committee is considered by the Congressman, to a repudiation of the direct primary.

J. Bruce Kramer of Montana raised the point of order, after Mr. O'Shaunessy had claimed the seat of Mr. Greene, that inasmuch as the convention had seated Mr. Greene and elected him national committeeman the national committee had no jurisdiction. Colonel John McGraw of West Virginia and A. A. Jones of New Mexico urged that a hearing be given Mr. O'Shaunessy, but this was not adopted. The point of order was sustained by Chairman Mack.

Mr. O'Shaunessy's protest grew out of the troubles which resulted from the Democratic primaries in this state. He claimed that his opponent for a seat in the national committee was elected through fraud and that many more ballots were found in the boxes in the Third ward, Providence, and in Pawtucket and other places than were really cast.

The Congressman made a postal card canvass of certain of the protested districts and claimed to have received proofs of gross fraud in connection with the holding of the primaries. This proof he was prepared to offer to the national body, but by its action the committee has taken the attitude that it does not care to hear of primary frauds. As the committee is the court of last resort in the matter, it is probable that this finally disposes of the controversy.

NO OLD-TIME ENTHUSIASM.

Lack of It Noticeable at Conventions in Chicago and Baltimore.

Democrats Were in Earnest, If Not Demonstrative—No Chance for Third Party Recruits.

[Baltimore correspondence of the News.]

BALTIMORE, July 4.—The manner in which the American people make their Presidents has many incongruous propositions. I commented on the speed which characterized the men at Chicago in rushing through the work of naming a candidate. In Baltimore there was not so much speed; but just think of a convention of more than 1,000 men, representing half the people of the United States staying up all night, listening to long winded speeches and to hours of senseless shouting and roars of noise misnamed "demonstrations." Not since the days when Blaine fired his followers to a wild pitch of enthusiasm has there been an occasion when an outburst for a candidate placed in nomination ought to be more than 10 minutes' duration. And these demonstrations now go to an hour and an hour and a quarter.

Save for the cheering which a candidate should naturally receive when placed in nomination there was not the slightest need for the "demonstrations" on the night the nominating speeches were made. "Bunk" is what the newspaper men say of them. The newspaper men tell their readers that the "demonstrations" are manufactured, and everybody knows that they do not influence a single vote. And yet more than 1,000 men will stay there and submit to the waste of time even when the convention continues all night and has to adjourn for all day. The delegates not only submit, but in many cases they prepare and foster the "wild scenes" which are supposed to stampede conventions.

I have attended every national convention of all parties since 1888, and there is nothing new in the stunts. There are flags, processions, with the state standards carried up and down the aisles, pictures of the candidates held aloft, banners with supposed catchy phrases inscribed upon them, big pictures of the candidates swung from the galleries, the inevitable woman leading the cheering from the gallery and many old familiar stunts, but nothing new, everything bearing the hand mark of "manufactured to order" enthusiasm. If there is a new era in conventions four years from now let us hope that the "demonstration" will be swept out with the old things and sent to the scrap pile.

Neither the Chicago nor the Baltimore convention provoked the old time enthusiasm which has been exhibited on occasions when there was not even a question about the nominee. I have come to the conclusion that a crowd likes to go to a convention for the purpose of shouting with the winner. If they know who that winner is before the nomination is made, so much the better for their enthusiasm. Both at Chicago and Baltimore the convention shouter, the fellow who makes so much noise, was in some doubt and feared he might be on the wrong side. At least there should be some sort of explanation for the rather limp manner of the crowds outside the convention hall.

But the real explanation is that the crowds were not here. Baltimore was disappointed because one or two hundred thousand men did not come here in support of the different candidates. If such crowds had come to Baltimore no one can tell how they would have been accommodated. One reason why such big delegations did not come was because they could not get rooms and headquarters in one place or even in one locality. They would have been scattered all over the city. There would have been no way to gather the clubs and make a show when they went out to parade.

The absence of marching clubs a thousand strong deprived the convention of an interesting feature. At all previous conventions there have been clubs supporting different candidates who would parade the streets and make demonstrations for their favorites. If such organizations had come to Baltimore they would have congested the streets and would have been unable to enter the hotel lobbies. As it was we would occasionally have a group with the "houn' dawg" song and perhaps another group singing songs for Bryan. There was a bunch of colleged men and boys that made a noise for Wilson from time to time but they confined their efforts largely to the hall. There never was anything done to enthuse the crowd for Harmon, and the men from the South who were for Underwood seemed to be perfunctorially performing a duty. So all the features which make a convention picturesque and intensely interesting so far as the outside show was concerned were lacking at Baltimore.

The convention itself was in earnest. The men inside the big armory building who had the responsibility of naming a candidate seemed anxious to have a man selected who would win. It was a question as to which of the several candidates would poll the most votes with the large majority of the delegates. Of course it is assumed that there were votes cast for men who were not expected to secure the full strength of the party, but the persistent manner in which men stuck to their convention duties showed that they were there for the purpose of accomplishing results.

The most pleased man in all the great mass of people who filled the convention hall on the night that Mr. Bryan stirred up such a great row was Mr. Bryan. After he had thrown his bombshell and men were struggling with each other, the mob roaring cheers and hurling defiance, Mr. Bryan's broad face was wreathed in smiles. He looked over that seething, struggling, mad and frenzied mob with the utmost complacency and showed keen enjoyment. There may be one man who can stir up more trouble and enjoy it better than Mr. Bryan, but there is only one, and he is the exception to all rules.

Baltimore was a poor place for the recruiting parties of the third party. After Mr. Bryan had his way with the platform and put through his resolution denouncing the plutocrats there was no occasion for anyone to lead a third party from the assembled Democrats. Then it was perfectly plain that if Mr. Bryan should join a third party movement there would be a mighty jostling at the top notwithstanding the adage that "there is plenty of room at the top." There is just room for one at the top of the third party movement, and Mr. Bryan would have difficulty in getting a foothold, even if he were disposed to leave the Democratic organization.

Between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning, when everybody was tired and depressed, the Baltimore convention or such portion of it as remained in the hall, heard one of the best nominating speeches ever delivered in a convention since the time Bob Ingersoll nominated Blaine. It fitted Governor Wilson and was full of epigrams and well turned and catchy phrases. It made that tired crowd sit up and take notice.

I don't suppose a regular national convention attendant ever steps inside of one of those vast auditoriums without feeling that there is the possibility of a great catastrophe. The accident insurance companies recognize it, for they refuse to grant accident insurance to men who attend the conventions. There have been many narrow escapes from serious consequences in the crush and excitement of convention times.

Don't Hide Them with a Veil; Remove Them with the New Drug.

An eminent skin specialist recently discovered a new drug, othine—double strength, which is so uniformly successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold by Hall & Lyon Co., under an absolute guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of othine and remove them. Even the first night's use will show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. It is absolutely harmless and cannot injure the most tender skin.

Be sure to ask Hall & Lyon Co., for the double strength othine; it is this that is sold on the money back guarantee.

CURED ECZEMA ON HANDS

"Eight years ago I got eczema all over my hands. My fingers fairly bled and it itched until it almost drove me frantic. The eruption began with itching under the skin. It spread fast from between my fingers around the nails and all over the whole hands. I got a pair of rubber gloves in order to wash dishes. Then it spread all over the left side of my chest. A fine doctor treated the trouble two weeks, but did me no good. I cried night and day. Then I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment, but without much hope as I had gone so long. There was a marked change the second day, and so on until I was entirely cured. The Cuticura Soap we have always kept in our home, and we decided after that lesson that it is a cheap soap in price and the very best in quality." My husband will use no other soap in his shaving mug." (Signed) Mrs. G. A. Selby, Redondo Beach, Cal., Jan. 15, 1911.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment are for sale throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, but hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each together with 32-p. booklet on the skin and scalp will be mailed free, on application. Address "Cuticura," Dept. KK, Boston.

THE BEACH THE THING.

the day and such additional provisions had been brought to the beach as could be secured on such a day.

The attractions held the crowd so that its dispersement was gradual, the cars carrying crowded fares nearly up to midnight. With all that, thousands walked home or rode away in carriages and automobiles.

In the late hours of the evening the directors of the Beach Association, who had been on the ground almost all day, giving their personal attention to affairs, had little breathing spells and could confer with each other as to the success of the day. They were sure the venture had made a hit, for the crowd had been there and the attractions well patronized.

A story of the day at the beach without referring to the employes would be incomplete. There is an army of them, but untrained as most of them are to dealing with crowds they did good work. Many did not leave until after midnight Wednesday, because they needed to straighten up after the rush of that evening. This meant a walk home, because the cars had stopped running. They were back on their jobs early Thursday morning, in most cases after an early breakfast. Then came the rush of serving others for a long stretch of hours, during which those who had brought luncheon did not have time to eat it. Even the waiters in the restaurant had no time to eat and probably a small portion of the officials and employes realized more than one real meal during the day, which lasted until midnight and later for some.

A street railway conductor of 18 years' experience on the local road says he never knew travel to the beach to be so heavy. He seems to have been right, for there were hours at a time when there were not cars enough to take the people waiting, and few paid much attention to seats; if they could find a place to hang on they seemed satisfied. All the cars which could be manned were out and were run as advantageously as the trackage would permit. It was impossible to run them in more than strings of four over the beach line, because of the turnouts, and there were delays incident to so much single track.

It has been said repeatedly that not only would intoxicating liquors not be allowed on the beach but that drunkenness there would not be countenanced. The order Thursday was excellent, and only in one or two instances did a man who had been drinking reach the board walk. When one did he was promptly taken in charge by one of the special officers, escorted to the road and told that he must go back to the city. The beach specials were augmented by regulars and specials from the city.

Everybody goes where the crowd goes, and Wednesday evening that seemed to be to the beach. If there were other people in town they were mostly in their homes, and of course other places of entertainment suffered.

To see the beach lighted and decide upon its claims as an evening resort was the purpose of some. Others went to see what sort of a place of amusement had been made in comparison with previous years. Except for a change in the form of things they had gathered from what they had read or heard that the only really new thing was the dance hall. There had much been said about a board walk, but in their opinion there was one before. Naturally when they arrived at the beach they revised their views. New hands, with new ideas, though with the same number of features—for the photographic gallery is gone, and in its place is the dance hall—had made a great difference in the place.

It was not possible to have the lighting arrangements entirely completed and it was expected that after the try-out places would be found which needed more attention. The car company had not even finished the lighting along the entrance walk. It had hundreds of lights in place, but is to carry the effect the whole length of the walk.

The dance hall took well. Admission tickets were sold, so that it would not be too crowded on the first night. The orchestra was good and the floor gave satisfaction. During the day a check room had been so far constructed that it could be used, though it was not completed. The walk outside the hall was jammed with people.

The merry-go round, the second largest in the country, opened for business and did business. It proved an attraction for grown people as well as children and its gorgeous coloring was remarked upon. The dining hall and ice cream parlor were both open and ready to respond to the demands of customers.

The formal opening may be said to have been a thorough success, so far as the artificial attractions were concerned. As to those furnished by nature, the sands were so well lighted that it was possible to walk or sit on them without being disturbed, as in the past during the evening. There were plenty of policemen, regulars and specials, and those who have made the beach an undesirable place for most people to spend the evening will soon find that they must go elsewhere. The managment proposes to make the beach safe and pleasant for women and children at all reasonable hours, and that is what it has not been after dark, often.

THE REGATTA CELEBRATION.

Motor Boat Race Long Distance Run by Conanicut Yacht Club and Cutter Contest.

The regatta part of the city's celebration of the Fourth resolved itself into a motor boat race, only one sailing craft responding to the call. Mr. E. P. Gosling was on hand with his catboat Marie, but he was alone and as it was evident that there could be no race with only one boat the sailing event was called off.

There were six starters in the motor boat race, but the Walkover soon withdrew, because there was too much sea outside. The others kept on until in the third round the Mildred had engine troubles and was forced to retire. At that time she was in second place; that is, she was within her time limit.

The two smaller boats, Four Sisters and Edith L., had troubles of their own but stood to it with pluck. The crew of the Four Sisters was pumping on the first round and evidently kept at the pump all the time. Even those on the big Tippo said it was very rough toward the close of the race. It was a day when the big boat had an advantage over the small and the big one won.

Commodore Caswell of the Newport Yacht Club supplied his flagship Wooglin for the use of the regatta committee. The figures, the start being at 2:08, are as follows:

	Elapsed time	Corrected time
Tippo, W. J. Browley	1:19:16	1:19:16
Welcome, A. Simmons	1:37:40	1:21:48
Four Sisters, G. Bliven	1:44:07	1:22:15
Edith L., Lord	1:53:39	1:23:47
Mildred, G. Hanover,	Did not finish
Walk Over, Metcalf,	Withdrew

The long-distance race by the Conanicut Yacht Club did not prove the drawing card expected, probably because it did not count for the season's championship. Four big boats and three 15-footers were at the start, which was delayed until noon because some of the boats were slow in coming to the line.

The conditions were ideal for a good race. A stiff southwest wind gave the boats all they needed and some had in balance reefs at the start. The Arrow gave the spectators on the Yacht Club pier some idea of what the race was to be on her run over from Newport, making better time than a good launch. The tide was on the ebb and after rounding Beavertail all the boats faced the ebb in the long run to Conanicut Park, but it was before the wind and they did not notice it. The wind blew very fresh about the Park.

The Arrow took the lead in the beat out to Beavertail, with the Dorothy a good second. On the run to the Park the length of the Momo counted, and so did the well known running qualities of the Columbia. In jibing before reaching the Park the Arrow lost her spinnaker and was relegated to fourth place among the big boats. The Momo finished first and the Dorothy second—the first of the 18-footers. The Columbia and Arrow made a great finish, there being one second between them. The little fellows were in the rear but even they made better time than was thought possible. The start was at noon and the times as follows:

	Elapsed time	Corrected time
Columbia, Wood Bros.	3:45:59	3:28:22
Momo, W. Butler.	3:20:00	3:20:00
Dorothy, W. D. Wood	3:42:00	3:34:51
Arrow, B. C. Hirst, Jr.	3:46:00	3:38:59
Carbliana, W. Ashton	4:09:05	3:45:35
Swan, L. G. Mason	4:09:38	3:46:08
Paprika, T. Sparrow	4:12:00	3:48:30

Five crews from the Training Station and one from the Constellation guard took part in the 12 oared cutter race from the Training Station to Long wharf, at 6 o'clock. There was the usual turnout of spectators at the end of the wharf and of people in boats and naval cutters on the water. The crew from the Constellation was first across the finish line, with boat No. 31 seconds. These two made a pretty race, but the others were well stretched out. The officers from the Station supplied officials for the race and the aldermanic committee was there to see the finish.

SPORTS AT MORTON PARK.

Events for Fourth of July for Prizes Offered by City Witnessed by Many People.

Many people were at Morton Park as usual to see the Fourth of July sports, for which the city offered prizes. The events were run off on the level grass in the centre and the spectators formed a half-circle outside the lines. Eleven contests were planned, but the 440-yard run for high school boys was omitted, as there were not enough entries. The Newport Military Band played while the sports were on, and for some time before. Several of the aldermen were present to see that everything went off smoothly.

The races for boys came first, starting with the 100-yard dash for those under 14 years. The winners were Alfred Carter, first; C. Kaull, second, and Walter Harmon, third, the prizes being $3, $2 and $1.

The 100-yard dash for grammar school boys was won by Michael McCarthy, with John Murphy second, and Louis Russo third; prizes $3, $2 and $1.

Half-mile race for men—Won by Henry Ramsey, first; John F. Casey, second; C. P. Ward, Jr., third; prizes, $5, $3, $2.

Half-mile walk—Won by Michael Shea; Duncan Edward second; prizes, $5 and $2.

Mile run—Won by John Greenwood of Fall River; Manford Stanley of Fort Greble, second, Ramsey of Fort Adams third.

Running broad jump—Won by Czarnewski of Fort Greble, 17 feet; Harry Townsend second, 16 feet, 3½ inches.

Twelve-pound shot put—Won by John McBane, 41 feet 8 inches; Scott Munsey of Fort Adams second, 40 feet 6 inches; William Wilkie of Fort Adams third, 39 feet 1 inch.

Shoe race—Won by Alfred Carter; Michael McCarthy second, Daniel McGrath third. The prizes were three pairs of shoes.

Sack race—Won by G. E. Bencivenge; Michael McCarthy, second, Walter Harmon third.

The last event was a 100-yard race for girls under 16 and was won by Celia Crowell, with Gertrude Lawton second and Katherine Sullivan third.

Mr. Christopher P. Ward had general charge, Alderman McLeish was referee, Aldermen Leddy and Hughes judges, Frank Corridon starter, William J. McCormick, measurer and Cornelius W. Callahan clerk and scorer.

A HOME WEDDING.

Miss Mabel F. Carry and William C. Mustard Married by Rev. Emery H. Porter.

Miss Mabel F. Carry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Carry, and Mr. William C. Mustard were married Wednesday evening at the residence of the bride's parents on Broadway, Rev. Emery H. Porter, D. D., rector of Emmanuel Church, officiating. The ceremony was performed in the parlor, which was handsomely decorated with palms and potted plants, and as the bride entered the room, escorted by her father, Miss Letitia Dwyer played the "Lohengrin" wedding march. The bride wore a gown of white crepe du chine and was attended by Mrs. A. L. Carry as matron of honor, Miss Genevra Carry as bridesmaid and little Miss Carry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carry, as flower girl. Mr. George F. Ward was the groom's attendant. After the ceremony, which was witnessed by a small company of relatives and friends, Mr. and Mrs. Mustard left on their weding trip and at its conclusion will go to Providence to make their home, Mr. Mustard being engaged in business there.

FOR THE SAILOR BOYS.

Series of Sports, Special Dinner and Evening Entertainment of Vaudeville.

The features of the celebration of the Fourth at the Training Station were a series of sports, with prizes, [illegible] the usual Independence Day dinner served throughout the navy. It was also a great day for visitors, many parents and friends of the young sailors coming from near-by cities and towns to spend the day. Besides the field sports and the dinner, there was a ball game in the afternoon between the sailors and a team from Fort Adams, which drew a regular holiday crowd. In the evening there was an entertainment in the auditorium, Chief Boatswain John Davis, athletic officer at the Station, had charge of all the special events of the day.

The sports began with a cutter race between the apprentice seamen of Division 2-5, under Master-at-Arms Heard, and the yeoman school, under Yeoman Lemon. After an exciting contest the apprentice boys won.

A cutter race followed between the Constellation Guard and the Ship's Company, captained by Coffey and Callahan. The Guard won by 10 lengths.

Hendricks of Division 2-4 won the mile run, Dwyer finishing second. This was over the drill ground, and was made in good time.

Dean of Division 2-5 ran ahead of the others all through the 100-yard dash, with Burns of Division 2-7 not far behind.

In the obstacle race Dorn of Division 2-6 was first, and Miorana of Division 2-7 second.

In the three-legged race the team of Hendricks and Elsenburg won first prize, Tibbets and Dean were second.

John Halo of Division 2-7 finished first in the sack race, with A. J. Hinds of Division 2-8 second.

In the shoe race Rottger of Division 2-6 was first and Schwarz second.

Wallach of Division 2-7 was first in the potato race, Hendricks of Division 2-5 second, and Bouddreau of Division 2-6 third.

In the "bobbing for apples" test Schwarz of Division 2-6 was first, and Stegendorf of 2-7 second.

The spoon race was won by Schwarz of 2-6 and Mitchell, also of 2-6.

The 50-yard dash backwards went to Hendricks of Division 2-4 and Dean of 2-5.

The tug-o-war between the Guard and the apprentice seamen of Division 2-5 proved a surprise. In two trials the Guard, who are ordinary seamen, were pulled over the line by the apprentice boys.

This was the last event of the morning and the winners assembled in the drill hall in barracks C for the distribution of prizes.

After dinner the base ball game was won by Fort Adams, 17 to 2. The sailors felt keenly the sting of defeat, but the cutter race, which followed shortly afterwards, helped them forget it, as they had a good opportunity to watch the boats from the shore.

The entertainment in the auditorium was the centre of attraction in the evening and was largely attended by the apprentices, their friends, and a number of others, there being accommodations for seating 300. The show, which was under the direction of Mr. Davis, was in two parts, the first being divided into five acts, as follows:

1—N. Staples, J. Haugh and L. Carney in a vaudeville sketch.

2—Quartet, C. L. Coogan, A. Lohr, C. F. Gauz and J. Miller.

3—W. F. Landon and J. B. St. Amond.

4—The Martins.

5—Sketch, "Ins and Outs," Donovan, Neulleb and Haugh.

Part 2 offered a musical comedy, with the following cast:

Musical teacher	J. Sullivan
Weary Willie	W. Tiburc
Patrick Finklestein	R. Neulleb
Josh Hayseed	S. F. Everett
Pianist	W. LeFurge

The entertainment closed with the showing of moving pictures and comical slides and at the end the sailors showed that they were much pleased with the way in which they had been entertained, by applauding vigorously.

MIDDLETOWN.

[Regular correspondence of the News]

At the supper served at the home of Mrs. John Elliott, West Main road, Wednesday evening a large number were present. The menu included cold meats, vegetable salad, rolls, cake and coffee, and was daintily served. The proceeds are for the benefit of the St. Mary's choir fund. The affair was in charge of Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. J. Lincoln Sherman and Mrs. F. B. Coggeshall.

The Sunday School and parish picnic of the Berkeley Memorial Chapel will be held July 23, at "Bethshan-in-the-Woods."

Middletown was unusually quiet on the Fourth, although numerous American flags about the town gave evidence of the occasion. Many of the townspeople spent a portion of the day at the Newport beach.

Under the direction of Mrs. William M. Hughes a musical and literary entertainment is soon to be given at Holy Cross guild house for the benefit of the guild.

Mrs. Edward Tilley and her two sons, of Providence, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peckham on Wapping road. Mr. Tilley, who spent the Fourth here, returned to Providence in the evening.

Rev. George Grenville Merrill will occupy the pulpit of the Berkeley Memorial Chapel during the latter portion of the present month.

SOME OLD-TIME FEATURES.

one sooner than he expected, for in 1854 he was elected, chiefly because he denounced President Polk for having forced our war upon Mexico unjustly. In Congress he spoke very little, but offered a bill for the emancipation of slaves in the District of Columbia and voted for the Wilmot proviso to prohibit slavery in the territories acquired from Mexico. These anti-slavery incidents showed how earnest an abolitionist he was at a time when it was extremely unpopular to be an abolitionist.

He achieved no more prominence in Congress than he had done in the Illinois legislature and not having been reelected, he retired in 1849, a somewhat disappointed man, and resumed his practice in Springfield.

The repeal of the Missouri Compromise, opening the territories of the United States to slavery not long after was aroused the free states to an excited protest against it. Slavery became a burning issue and the Republican party was created to fight it. Stephen A. Douglas was then United States Senator from Illinois, and the best known and most popular statesman in the country. He was the champion of the pro-slavery party, and Lincoln, being well known as an abolitionist in Illinois, although not out of it, was chosen by the Whigs, or rather the Republican convention of Illinois in 1854, to debate the great slavery question face to face with Douglas in a series of meetings. This was the great opportunity of Lincoln's life and he accepted the task. Douglas and Lincoln were natural political antagonists and Douglas was the most famous political orator of his time. This linking of Douglas with Lincoln was a strange political conjunction, an association of opposites.

It was from the unpromising environment and the lowly associations and unpolished if not rough materials I have described, that Lincoln, the future statesman and great war President, was evolved through the wonderful alchemy of our free institutions.

But it was not until Lincoln had become a practicing lawyer in Illinois and active in practical politics that he began to make his mark even in his own state, and was little heard of outside of it until his debates with Douglas in the fifties became famous and gave him a national reputation. It was really these debates with Douglas in which Douglas came off second best that led to his nomination for the Presidency in 1860. Moreover, it was one of the political marvels of the time that Lincoln should have succeeded so well as a strategist and debater in the contest with his great adversary Douglas, for he had little of that higher education and comprehensive knowledge of American history and public matters and events that his highly trained opponent possessed. Lincoln's success was due to the debates being practically confined to the slavery question, and on this by hard study he had made his mind a storehouse of facts and arguments. His earnestness, his convictions made him eloquent and he likened the existence of slavery in the United States to a house divided against itself. Yet he was not a radical. The result of these debates cost Douglas the Presidency, to which he had expected to be elected in 1860, and gave it to Lincoln. Yet he had previously regarded and looked down upon Lincoln as a harmless foe of little consequence. Lincoln's election by a majority of 57 votes in the electoral college dealt a political death blow to Douglas. That election, too, was the signal for disunion in the South.

For leadership in the pending crisis Lincoln was well fitted as his inaugural address as President showed, for it temperately and kindly foreshadowed his course, whereas a sensational anti-slavery declaration had been looked for, in this he showed his wisdom. Yet he told the South it was his sworn duty to preserve the Union, whereas it was not the duty of the South to destroy it. He thus appealed for the Union to the South bent on disunion at any cost, and to Southern sympathizers and "copperheads" at the North. But when on the twelfth of April, 1861, Fort Sumter was fired on he called for troops and the North rushed to arms.

He was then regarded with jealous eyes by not only Secretary Stanton, but William H. Seward his Secretary of State, who regarded him somewhat contemptuously and laid a memorandum before him which virtually proposed to provoke a foreign war and place the reins of government in Seward's hands in order to bring back the South. Lincoln rejected this peremptorily without however resenting the implied insult, for he felt that Seward under control was still a good man for the place. After that Seward understood and bowed to Lincoln in all he did, just as Secretary Stanton did and Seward's foreign war prescription was forgotten, while the ascendency of Lincoln over his cabinet as the ruling spirit became more and more complete as its members became better acquainted with him.

But Lincoln, through his moderate course, at first excited the hostility of the anti-slavery party and was a target for abuse from the press as violent as it was unjust. He had always felt sure that the war would end slavery, but in 1862 after some disastrous battles there was much talk of foreign recognition of the Southern Confederacy as a belligerent, and July 21, 1862, he astonished his cabinet by submitting a draft of his emancipation proclamation. This he argued would prevent foreign recognition of the Confederacy, with slavery, against the United States fighting to abolish slavery. But his cabinet urged delay in issuing it and it was not until September 22, 1862, that it appeared. The effect was electrical throughout the world, and its issue was a splendid act of statesmanship. From that time forward it was seen that the Southern Confederacy, like slavery, was doomed for its resources in men, money and materials were rapidly dwindling, while the United States had an unlimited abundance of these to draw upon; and so the end, long foreseen, came with Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox.

Lincoln's power of clear and condensed statement—as shown by his proclamations and letters—was very unusual, and it was perhaps largely owing to the scarcity of paper in the home of his youth which led him to pencil his compositions on a scraped wooden shovel. His language was always simple, direct, lucid and logical and his humorous illustrations enlivened what he said, especially with anecdotes of Western life, of which he had an abundant supply.

The kindliness of his disposition top did much to disarm and moderate political rancor and prejudice when he reasoned with opponents. His individuality, however, did not impress the eye or the ear so much as the mind; yet his voice was not musical. It was somewhat piercing and even shrill when it rose to its highest pitch in moments of great earnestness. Moreover, he was without any of the graces of oratory.

The interest and respect that he inspired came from the evident depth of his sympathies and convictions, and his nature was sympathetic to a very uncommon degree. He could feel keenly the woes of others, particularly when suffering cruel, unjust or distressing was actually seen by or presented to him, and it gave him pleasure to relieve distress or oppression or right a wrong. Consequently he found it hard to resist appeals to his compassion, where his refusal would cause keen disappointment, pain or sorrow, and he said more than once, "My difficulty to say 'no' is a positive weakness." This quality of sympathy was attractive and drew others towards him, despite his long, ungainly limbs and rustic appearance. There was an especially tender spot in his heart for the poor and lowly and those unable to help themselves. He called them the plain people, and he was notably the friend of the plain people; the plain people knew it and appreciated, esteemed and loved him all the more because he appreciated and felt for them.

He was one of them in heart and never looked down on his parentage or early life and belongings, although he seldom or never spoke of his father or his mother. Intellectually he had left them and his youthful associates far behind, yet he had not outgrown the manners and some of the talk of the backwoods, and never resented being called "Abe" or "Old Abe" by old acquaintances of the backwoods when they called at the White House. His wants, too, remained as simple as ever despite the efforts of his wife to make him dress well and become the glass of fashion and the mould of form. He was unspoiled by fortune.

Lincoln's emancipation proclamation sealed the doom of secession, slavery and the Southern Confederacy, and was one of the greatest State papers recorded in history. His cruel assassination crowned him as a martyr in a great cause, the cause of freedom and the Union.

Lincoln's death was mourned not only in the North, but in the South, as a great national calamity, for the war had ended before the assassin fired his fatal shot, a shot that shocked America and the world. His funeral procession was witnessed by mourning millions, with their heads uncovered, as it passed in state from city to city, through streets draped with funeral emblems, on its way from Washington to the tomb in Illinois, the state from which he had been nominated for the Presidency. When it reached New York I was one of the committee that received it. I stood beside the catafalque on which the martyred President's body lay in state in our City Hall, and there it was viewed by many thousands of citizens, with many negroes among them, who deeply deplored his loss, not a few of them shedding tears as they passed, while women were heard to sob. Similar touching scenes were visible in the other cities, as the throngs filed past the catafalque in double lines. They were sincere mourners and the whole nation was grief-stricken.

We honor Abraham Lincoln as one of the best and greatest of Americans, and in him the world sees one of the grandest figures in all history.

Mr. Clews spoke clearly and forcibly and his utterances were frequently applauded. His subject gave him opportunity to appeal to the patriotism of the present day and he took advantage of this in a pleasant manner. The address was listened to with close attention, and there was nothing, not even a firecracker, to interrupt the speaker or inconvenience his hearers. At the conclusion of the address the assemblage left the park, the xercises being concluded without formality.

At noon the bells were again rung, the Artillery company fired another salute, and the forts and ships in the harbor also fired a national salute.

A FRUIT PARADISE.

—[By Harris Deans, in Wide Awake.]

Switzerland is the paradise of the fruit lover. During the whole course of my journey through Switzerland I only saw one non-fruit-bearing tree. I imagine it was imported from foreign parts as a curiosity.

The very hedges are currant bushes, while the roads are lined with cherry trees. These trees are planted at regular intervals, and serve to mark off certain measurements. I observed a curious phenomenon with regard to these trees. With such a profusion one would expect colts to be rampant among the children. Nature has avoided this danger by teaching the fruit trees to grow all their branches at the top. Now and then, indeed, one finds they attempted to grow branches lower down, but they soon got discouraged. They end off sharply after about a foot—almost as if they had been cut off. Wonderful indeed are the ways of nature!

On the sloping banks of the Rhine, too, the trees bear no fruit at all on the side near the road. I have tried to persuade myself that this is some more of nature's wisdom, but I haven't succeeded as well as I might. There is a sceptical trait in my character which handicaps me as a scientific discoverer. Sometimes I think the barren-sided condition of the trees is due to the children getting there before I did.

CONVINCING TESTIMONY

Such statements prove merit.

Arthur J. Oakley, 20 Gould St., Newport, R. I., says: "I have not been bothered by kidney trouble since I used Doan's Kidney Pills some years ago, and for that reason, I willingly confirm the public statement I gave in their praise at that time. My kidneys were badly disordered and the kidney secretions were too frequent in passage. My back also ached and in the morning I could hardly arise. Doan's Kidney Pills procured at Wright & Hay's Drug Store gave me relief at once and the contents of two boxes completely cured me."

SWEDES CAPTURE THREE PRIZES.

Stockholm Sets Standard for Olympic Arrangements.

STOCKHOLM, July 5.—Stockholm has set a standard for Olympic arrangements and hospitality which future Olympiads hardly will be able to surpass not only in the stadium appointments, which are the most luxurious for athletes ever known in Europe, but in the facilities provided for the press and visitors within the stadium and everywhere about the capital.

The ceremonies of opening the athletic section of the games will be held tomorrow. After the march past the king, participated in by athletes of all nations, Crown Prince Gustave Adolph, the honorary president of the Swedish Olympic committee, will deliver an address. Court chaplain Ahfelt will then read the sermon, after which the hymn "A mighty fortress is our god" will be sung by the entire assemblage.

The Swedes today captured all three prizes in the miniature rifle individual shooting competition at the Olympic games. Competitors from seven nations, including the United States, participated in the shoot.

NEW HAVEN ROAD RESTRAINED.

Rutland Stockholders Fear Decline in Price of Stock.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Judge Gerard, by a decision handed down in the supreme court today, continued the temporary injunction restraining the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company from purchasing from the New York Central Railroad Company the majority of or controlling amount of stock of the Rutland Railroad Company. The injunction was asked by minority stockholders of the Rutland, who contended that they would suffer irreparable injuries by a decline in the price of the stock of the road if the New Haven acquired control.

THURSDAY'S BASE BALL.

Trojans Beaten by Louisiana Team, But Defeat the Flotilla Stars—Broadways Win, 8 to 4.

The expectation that the team of battleship Louisiana would put up a good article of base ball in the game with the Trojans Thursday afternoon was fully met. The score—Trojans 0, Louisiana 3—shows that they put it over the local boys, while the record of base hits, 14 to 4, indicates that the batting was more one-sided than the score. The sailors played a fine game in the field and their pitcher was effective. The Trojans also put up a stiff fielding game and cut off many possible runs by brilliant plays. O'Connell pitched well, but was hit hard. In the absence of Ralph O'Connell, Martin played third base.

In the morning the Trojans had no trouble in defeating a team made up of players from the torpedo boats, called the Flotilla Stars. They rolled up three runs in the second, but then Gillis, who did the pitching for the Trojans settled down and held them safe. The final score was 6 to 3.

On the Broadway grounds the Broadways defeated the Torpedo Station team, 8 to 4, in the morning in a well played game. The team from the Montgomery was scheduled for the afternoon, but signals must have been miscarried, for only a few of the players reported. A picked team was made up, but after the Broadway batters had made 14 runs in their half of the first inning the game was uninteresting. It went only five innings, the score being 19 to 7.

JAMESTOWN.

Celebration of the Fourth of "Safe and Sane" Order With Much Activity on Water Front.

[Regular correspondence of The News.]

The celebration of the Fourth in this town was of the "safe and sane" order. There was an unusually large number of people on the island. Not only was the number of excursionists large but there are more cottagers and hotel guests here for the summer than usual. The celebration of the day and evening was far less noisy than usual, all seeming to enjoy themselves with the quieter forms of amusement. The result was that the police had little to do, the fire department did not have a call and the physicians were not required to dress cuts and burns.

There were several large gatherings for reunions and clambakes, and in the afternoon a ball game between the Jamestowns and Mayrants. This was one-sided, however, the local team winning by a score of 22 to 2.

During the evening the water front was the scene of much activity. The Thorndike was illuminated with red, white and blue electric lights, the effect being pretty. It was perhaps the most elaborate light decorations ever attempted on the island. The battleships, which were illuminated for the occasion, added much to the scene.

The new casino, which opened with a reception and dance, attracted a large number, many of the officers and ship men from the fleet being present in uniform.

Mr. and Mrs. Percival Gibson entertained a party of about 75 at a genuine Rhode Island clambake at their home on Southwest avenue on the Fourth. The bake, which was made under the supervision of Mr. Frederic Anthony, was a success in every particular. The tables were set beneath the shade of the large trees on the lawn, the weather being just right to make the place ideal for the occasion. The afternoon and evening were spent at various games and in a social way, the guests departing late.

Among those who spent the Fourth with relatives on the island were Mr. J. H. Gardner of Boston, Mr. Elisha Watson, Miss Marion Watson, Mr. Nicholas Carr and Miss M. Carr of Providence.

Mr. and Mrs. William Carpenter, who have been spending a portion of their honeymoon on the island, have returned to Providence.

The automobile stage across the island lost a tire Thursday morning and horse stages are replacing it until repairs can be made.

Battleship Iowa, which was anchored off the ferry, went outside this morning.

RUN TO BOOTHBAY HARBOR.

Eastern Yacht Club Fleet Resumes Cruise Along Maine Coast.

PORTLAND, Maine, July 5.—Under the most favorable conditions of wind and weather the Eastern Yacht Club fleet resumed today its cruise along the Maine coast, with Boothbay Harbor as the anchorage port for the night.

After yesterday's successful run from Marblehead, the yachtsmen were in no hurry to leave Peaks Island harbor. It was well along toward midafternoon before the fleet took to sea, but it was well that there was this hesitation, for the early morning hours were without the slightest signs of a breeze. About 9 a. m. a nice little air came puffing in from the eastward, through Whitehead passage, and shortly after the yachts headed down the main ship channel, around the other end of Cushings island, for the start of the day's sport off Whitch Rock light.

The cruising portion of the fleet did not start for some hours afterward and many of the steam yachts went into several other bays before the anchorage off Boothbay Harbor's wharves. The start of the day's racing was established by the committee boat shortly after 10 o'clock and at 10:30 the small boats were sent off. The first leg of the 28-mile course looked like a beat to windward at the start and all the yachts went across the line hard on the starboard tack. The fight for position in the three schooner division and the two for sloops was a lively one.

Commodore Paine counted 35 yachts under his command in Peaks Island harbor at colors today, two more than last year. The fleet also was better proportioned than last year, there being several more single stickers and steam yachts. It was expected that the fleet would reach Boothbay Harbor early in the afternoon.

The yachts had scarcely sailed a couple of miles before the wind hauled into the south-southeast and freshened to about 10 knots an hour. All the yachts made the run from the start to Seguin Island at a lively gait. The Elena, Enchantress and Irolita worked through the fleet rapidly and were well out ahead when Seguin Island was reached. Several yachts became involved in luffing matches, which carried them a couple of miles to the southward of their course. The entire fleet was well past Seguin Island by 1:30 and half an hour later the three big schooners had turned Bantam Ledge buoy and were heading in for the finish of the Cuckolds.

Provisions Reviving Ranks of Admiral and Vice Admiral Erased.

WASHINGTON, July 5.—On a point of order Senator Bristow eliminated from the naval bill the provision to revive the ranks of admiral and vice admiral for the commanders-in-chief of the Atlantic and Pacific fleets. The Kansas Senator declared that the principal purpose of such legislation was to pae the way for retirements on increased pay.

ARRIVAL OF THE HAMPTON STUDENTS.

The party of Hampton students who are to camp on part of the Terry estate arrived this afternoon on tug Westerly from Westerly and Watch Hill, where they have been. They brought their camp equipage, trunks, etc., and when the tug tied up at Long wharf, just before 1, they quickly had the baggage on the dock. There are 28 in the party, including three white men, Mr. Frizzell being in charge. The students wore khaki uniforms, army hats and russet shoes which showed that they had done some outdoor work. They were an active, happy, rugged et of young men, evidently well drilled and able to do work.

Incidentally, one who has visited the Institute says it is a treat to hear about 700 of them singing. They expect to stay here until Monday, according to present plans.

LINCOLN, Neb., July 5.—"Home folks" were all at the station today when W. J. Bryan's train arrived. Local and state officials, headed by Governor Aldrich, were on the station platform and numerous citizens of Lincoln were voluntary additions to the throng that lined the streets of the business district through which Bryan was escorted to a local hotel where he mounted the seat of his car and delivered a short address. Mrs. Bryan was with him, having joined him at the station and cheers for her were interspersed with those for her husband.

NEW YORK, July 5.—Wall Street—The market opened with Amalgamated Copper at 84½, American Beet Sugar 74¾, American Smelting and Refining 86, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe 108⅛, Baltimore & Ohio 108½, Brooklyn Rapid Transit 93⅞, Canadian Pacific 267¼, Chesapeake & Ohio 81, Erie 35½, Great Northern preferred 138, Great Northern Ore Certificates 45, Northern Pacific 123, Pennsylvania 124⅜, Reading 166⅞, Southern Railway 29, Union Pacific 169¼, United States Steel 71¾, United States Steel preferred 112½.

10—An irregular tone was manifested by the stock market at today's opening. American Tobacco rose 2 points and Canadian Pacific 1 point, with strength in Great Northern preferred, Northern Pacific, Brooklyn Transit and General Electric. There were declines, however, in Union Pacific, Amalgamated, Steel and some others.

11—Fractional advances after the opening in Atchison and Reading were conspicuous, the market breaking later on an active selling of Union Pacific, Steel, Reading and Amalgamated.

Noon—Much of the mid-week steadiness in the stock market was suddenly dissipated today. The selling was impartially distributed among such leaders as Union Pacific, Reading, Steel and Amalgamated, with weakness most marked in the latter. No special cause was advanced to explain the decline, which doubtless had bear assistance. Shares of the grain-carrying roads were inclined to further improvement, but fell back on the counter movement in the more active issues. Dealings dwindled as the list made feeble recovery from its low level and a repetition of recent stagnation followed. Bonds were steady. Money on call steady at 2⅞ per cent. Prime mercantile paper 4 to 4½ per cent. Exchanges $403,405,355; balances $21,929,831.

FESTIVITIES FOR THE FOURTH.

Dinner and Dance by Mr. and Mrs. W. Goadby Loew—Many Events at Summer Residences.

There were numerous social entertainments at the summer residences for the Fourth. The largest event of the day was the dinner and dance given by Mr. and Mrs. W. Goadby Loew at the Jennings cottage, "Bellacre," Bellevue avenue and Ledge road. Dinner was served for 48 guests, at four tables set on the broad piazzas, one decorated in red, one in white, another in blue and the fourth in yellow. The tennis court was transformed by Wadley and Smythe into a Venetian garden, the enclosed sides being covered with vines and flowers and numerous lanterns being suspended from the ceiling. The enclosure was arranged with palms and bay trees, forming nooks and corners in which were placed small tables, from which supper was served. Conrad's orchestra furnished music for dancing, many additional guests coming from other dinners.

Mrs. William Grosvenor gave a dinner and dance for young people at "Roslyn." The grounds were illuminated and the house decorated with flowers. The dance, which was largely attended, was given for Mrs. Grosvenor's younger daughter, Mrs. Dudley Davis and Mrs. G. Maurice Congdon assisting in receiving.

Dinners were given by Mrs. Hermann Oelrich, Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. Marsden J. Perry, Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss and Mrs. T. Suffern Taller.

There were luncheons by Mrs. Joseph Harriman, Mrs. Lewis Quentin Jones and Mrs. Barger Wallach; Mr. and Mrs. Henry A. C. Taylor gave a luncheon on steam yacht Wanderer and Mr. and Mrs. J. Stewart Barney a luncheon and sail on steam yacht Cavalier.

Charles Warren Lippitt entertained the members of the Cincinnati at "The Breakwater." Children's entertainments were given by Mrs. John Nicholas Brown, Mrs. French Vanderbilt and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr.

The Clam Bake Club gave its annual dinner at the clubhouse at Easton's Point.

Mrs. Pembroke Jones gave a dinner at "Sherwood."

There were fireworks displays at the residences of Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Commodore Cornelius Vanderbilt, Mrs. Herrmann Oelrichs and Mrs. John R. Drexel.

Luncheons were given Wednesday by Mrs. Burke-Roche and Mrs. Julian T. Davies. In the evening dinners were given by Colonel C. L. F. Robinson, Captain and Mrs. William B. Caperton, Mrs. French Vanderbilt, Mr. J. Norman deR. Whitehouse and Commander and Mrs. William V. Pratt.

Colonel Robinson's dinner at "Heartease" was for the officers and members of the Society of the Cincinnati. His guests included Colonel Asa Bird Gardiner, president of the Rhode Island Society; General Charles L. Davis of the North Carolina Cincinnati, Colonel E. D. Rodgers of Lockport, N. Y., and Messrs. George Washington Olney, Elisha Dyer, Edward Aborn Greene, Thomas Arnold Pierce and Henry Russell Downe of the Rhode Island Cincinnati.

Commander and Mrs. Pratt gave a dinner for 18 at the Eustis cottage, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Johnson of New York, who are their guests. The dinner was followed by informal dancing to which additional guests were invited.

Captain and Mrs. Caperton entertained at their cottage at the Naval Station, their guests being Commander and Mrs. George W. Williams, Lieutenant Commander and Mrs. Yates Stirling, Jr., Surgeon R. A. Bachmann, Dr. and Mrs. H. Warren Buckley and Miss Caperton.

BEACH MONEY PAID.

Attachment Released and Claim Satisfied, But Interest, Insurance and Caretaking Still Unsettled.

There was some legal action after the Board of Aldermen voted to pay the beach building award. It was known to some that Mr. J. J. Van Alen had a claim against the beach which was unsatisfied, and that legal steps would be taken as soon as this money became available. So City Treasurer Taylor was not at all surprised when Deputy Sheriff King put an attachment on the money. The attachment was for $1,500 and has since been released.

Today City Treasurer Taylor paid the money to Mr. F. H. Paine, who had power of attorney from the Easton's Beach Company. Mr. Paine said the company would put in a bill for interest and that also there is the matter of insurance, and something for care of the buildings, to come up yet for consideration.

SPOUTING YELLOWSTONE GEYSERS AT ISLAND PARK.

The big display of Italian fireworks at Island Park this week attracted so much favorable comment that it has been decided to give another exhibition there next week. The program will be entirely different and will include many new and novel features. Prominent among the special pieces will be one which has been shown but once before, being designed especially for use at the Bay State Street Railway Company's parks. This is called the "Spouting Geysers of the Yellowstone," from its resemblance, except for its brilliant colors, to those great natural wonders in the National Park.

THE BEACH THE THING.

Board Walk, Dining Hall, Sands and Other Sections Crowded Morning, Afternoon and Night.

Newport's Fourth of July was celebrated at the beach. There may have been other attractions about the city, but they were but individual affairs compared with the magnetic attraction of the beach—morning, afternoon and night. Competent judges—those who have been employed at the beach for years, street car men of long service and habitual visitors there—declare that never before have so many people visited the place in one day. The rolling chairs were not taken out and it was just as well, for there was no room for them. The board walk was crowded, the various buildings had their capacity, the sands were well dotted with people walking, sitting or lying about and the water had many bathers.

The crowds were not all excursionists, as towns-people by hundreds practically spent the day there. Not infrequently these were heard to remark that thy had not been there for years, but now that there is something there they would be seen frequently. Business men and retired men who are not often seen in places of public amusement were out in large numbers.

In many respects the patronage exceeded the capacity. For hours the entrance to the dining hall was a jam, but within every dinner was served with attention to details and there was no hurrying the diners and making them feel uncomfortable. It was not a strong box lunch party and the attack on the lunch counter for sandwiches, coffee, etc., was greater than could be met without much delay. The ice cream factory was worked to its limit, and the general store house was putting out supplies continuously, re-stocking the booths.

The merry-go-round was constantly packed and at times so many jumped on for whom there were no seats that they were driven off. There was a crush the entire afternoon about the ring, waiting for a chance to take a ride. The dance hall, too, drew a big crowd.

All these places of course accommodated but a small number compared with those who paraded back and forth on the board walk. It was "great," and every one seemed to say so.

Late in the afternoon, though the excursionists were pretty well cleared from the beach, there was still a large crowd and the cars were taking them down in practically as great loads as they were bringing up. Between 6 and 7 o'clock it was comparatively slow and some of the attendants had their first opportunity to secure a bite of lunch, not having eaten since early morning.

The slack time did not last long, for the cars were already being taxed. Long before the hour for the fireworks the vicinity of the beach appeared as if the entire population of the city had assembled en masse and when the fireworks began, 20 minutes late, there was a perfect jam on the hillside and extending down on the flat. It was with the utmost difficulty that the cars reached the end of their run or the numerous automobiles and carriages were navigated.

There had been a delay in turning on the lights on the board walk at the beach, and when they went on the lights on the highway also went on. One of the highway lights, it was found, promised to interfere with the effect of the fireworks display and the committee delayed proceedings in an endeavor to have it turned off. It was growing damp, and while they were informed that an electric light official was on the beach he could not be located in the crowd and the word was given to begin. The set-up for the show had been made in the forenoon, so there was no delay on that account.

The delay was due to the failure of a switch controlling that section to work. Superintendent Gosling was on the ground and had the lights put in commission just after he had a request for a light where the Municipal Band was located for the city concert. When the lights went on the Aldermen made the discovery that there was one which they wanted out to give the proper effect. No one could be found to turn it out.

The fireworks included an assortment of good material, but were not effectively displayed. The little triangle, where the old Allen pavilion once stood, was not even roped in, and when the crowd assembled the human barrier concealed much of the show for the greater number of those assembled. Had a raft been used off the beach or had the display been set up on the water works dam the public could have been kept at better distance. The effect for all would have been better and the dangers incident to such a display would have been lessened.

There were no rockets, the aerial portion being devoted to bombs or ascending pieces. On the ground there were a number of set and mechanical pieces. They comprised many of the modern ideas, but none of the really expensive works. A competent man had charge and Chemical 2 was at its usual position on Eustis avenue. The display lasted about 30 minutes.

When "Adieu" was shown the crowd did not all follow its usual custom of going back to the city as fast as possible; it divided into two parts, one of which did as usual, and to one up the hill it may have seemed as if all were hurrying away, while to one at the pavilion it may have appeared as if all were coming that way. The crowd was so large that those who went in an opposite direction were not missed.

At the beach of course the bathhouses were all closed, but everything else was ablaze with light and in full blast. It may have been crowded on the board walk the night before and during the day, but it was now packed for the whole thousand feet. The dance hall was running to its full limit, there was the same anxiously waiting throng about the hobby horses, the booths were dispensing eatables and drinkables, and at he restaurant such service was being rendered as was possible after the place had been "eaten out of house and home" during

SOME OLD-TIME FEATURES.

Among Them Bell Ringing and An Oration on Lincoln by Henry Clews.

Newport's Fourth of July Marked by Good Weather and Large Crowds Out for a Good Time.

Newport's Fourth of July this year was not a quiet one, but it was not unnecessarily noisy. It is always a day when the young—and all are young, or younger than their years, on this anniversary—give vent to their spirits, and noise of some sort is certain to follow. The weather was ideal for a holiday. It was pleasant but not uncomfortably warm—no hotter than one may expect in July. The citizens were out for at least a part of the day, and hundreds and possibly thousands came from elsewhere to spend the day.

The beach was the greatest attraction and was crowded far into the evening. The band concert and oration attracted many to Touro Park in the morning, the sports drew a large number to Morton Park in the afternoon, and in the evening hundreds went to the vicinity of the beach, if not to the beach, to see the fireworks, returning to the various parks to hear the concerts.

Many features of the old-fashioned Fourth of July celebrations were revived, including the bell ringing and the oration, and the city's program was successfully carried out by the members of the Board of Aldermen, who constituted the committee and had a busy day.

The celebration began at 6 o'clock in the morning, when the church bells were rung for half an hour and the gun squad of the Newport Artillery fired a national salute. Flags were early displayed on the public buildings and many private residences, and at "colors," 8 o'clock, the naval vessels in the inner and outer harbor dressed ships, with "rainbows" over the mast-heads. Several of the yachts were also "dressed" for the day.

At 10 o'clock the first part of the public program was started, the concert in Touro Park by the Newport Municipal band. This was preliminary to the oration. At first there were only a few to hear the music, but the number gradually increased until at it there were several hundred gathered about the band stand. This was decorated with American flags.

After the band had left, Mayor Boyle, accompanied by Mr. Henry Clews, the orator of the day; Mr. Cornelius C. Moore, who read the Declaration of Independence; Aldermen Albro, Shepley, Hughes, Liddy and McLeish, took seats in the band stand. Mayor Boyle spoke briefly and introduced Mr. Moore, who read the Declaration in a clear voice, which was heard throughout the park. When he had concluded Mayor Boyle introduced Mr. Clews, saying "It was an honor and pleasure to introduce the distinguished citizen of the United States and resident of Newport, Mr. Henry Clews." The oration, on Abraham Lincoln," was as follows:

Washington was by birth, education and environment an aristocrat. He had never known want. He was favored with the friendship of the leading men and women of his day. His rise to the top of the column on which are engraven the names of the great men of the world was most creditable, but not greatly surprising. That he was willing to risk, and did risk, his rank, standing and fortune in the cause of freedom for the colonies marked him as a patriot worthy of the enduring fame that will be his.

There were long, sad days when hope seemed dead; his army was footsore, cold, dissatisfied and hungry. Then it was that his true nature developed and endeared him to that and all future generations. His name will command reverence as long as this nation shall last.

Although born in England, but today and for over half a century an American citizen, I yield to no one in my reverence for Washington, who played such an important part in the making of this nation. However, I believe that there are others worthy to be the subject of an Independence Day celebration and I have chosen Lincoln, the saviour of the Union, as my subject, for this address.

Washington may be likened to one of our forefathers of long ago. Lincoln may be regarded as the friend of many who, like myself, are still living, and of your fathers and grandfathers who had the great honor of knowing him personally, as his day and deeds were in the time of men and women living today.

Washington lived long enough to know that he had been instrumental in establishing the United States on a firm basis, and he enjoyed his reward of honor and fame. Lincoln was stricken down by the hand of an assassin before he could fully realize the greatness of his deeds. And little did he think that the time would come when he would be celebrated as the greatest man of the world in a century of great men and advanced civilization.

Lincoln, the man, his character, and his acts, during the momentous crisis in the nation's history in which he piloted the ship of state to safety and victory, are entirely independent of historical embellishments and accessories of praise or blame and the glamor of history. The more truly and truthfully he is pictured and depicted the greater he becomes on the historic background where he, the great Emancipator of the Slave, now stands immortalized before America and the world.

During the Civil war I had many opportunities to meet Mr. Lincoln at the White House, as I made visits to Washington to see Mr. Salmon P. Chase, then Secretary of the Treasury, in connection with the United States war loans. My firm, as agent for the government, was helping to furnish the sinews of war by bond sales to the public, as the country was then in need of large amounts of money to carry on the war by land and sea; and I am glad to be able to say that my firm, and the other bankers associated with it in this great task, succeeded in supplying the United States treasury with all the funds needed to carry on that war for the Union till the Union arms were crowned with victory.

Mr. Lincoln—long, lean and somewhat awkward in his movements—had an ill-dressed, ungainly and rustic look that was all the more noticeable because of his being President of the United States, but his force of character was seen through the stern angularities of his face, while his humor, shrewdness and quiet geniality were reflected in his eyes. He required to be known to be appreciated at his full worth, for, to a stranger who knew nothing of him, his appearance was not what we would call dignified and commanding, or, let us say, not the best letter of introduction he could have carried to the Beau Brummels of society.

He was, as we all know, good-hearted and generally easy-going with all with whom he had to deal, and ready to yield a point in cabinet discussions where any doubt about a question existed, or where he thought it would do no harm to be complaisant.

He showed this yielding disposition towards Mr. Stanton his Secretary of War, on several occasions. The Secretary wanted to be an autocrat in his own department and practically curtail the President's power. So he was thus encouraged to arrogate to himself supreme power in the War Department. So much had he begun to consider himself dominant there that one day when Mr. Lincoln directed him to issue a certain order Mr. Stanton replied that he could not issue that order. He presumed too far, for this was more than the President of the United States—who is, by the constitution, commander-in-chief of the army and navy—was willing to submit to. It was practically an act of insubordination on Mr. Stanton's part. So Mr. Lincoln sent a peremptory order to Mr. Stanton to issue that order, and Mr. Stanton then saw that the President, and not he, the Secretary of War, was dominant in the War Department and that he would have to issue it or leave the cabinet, so he promptly issued the order.

Mr. Lincoln having thus asserted his position as the supreme head of the War Department, as well as of the government of the United States, and Mr. Stanton being relegated to his proper place as Secretary, there was no further trouble of this kind. Mr. Stanton, instead of resigning, became resigned to the situation.

In asserting his power, however, President Lincoln showed no indignation or resentment and he and Secretary Stanton remained as friendly as before this incident occurred, and gradually the two men acquired a real liking for each other, and Lincoln conferred more intimately with Stanton than any other member of the cabinet.

Lincoln had a rare talent for disarming and conciliating opponents and fault finders, being himself slow to wrath and lenient in his judgments. It was always true of him that, in his own words, he had charity for all and malice toward none.

Those who knew Lincoln best say he was unlike any other great man they had ever known or read of owing to the mixture of forces and qualities in him, the ideal and lofty with the rough and the commonplace. His characteristics were therefore interesting and even fascinating to them, and were powerful to influence both their heads and their hearts and admirably fitted him to be a leader of men. As a matter of fact he exerted a singular power over the members of his cabinet and others with whom he was brought much in contact.

He represented a surprising growth and development of mind and character hardly possible in any other country, and eloquently suggestive of the opportunities and possibilities open to its people. Born in a log cabin on a small Kentucky farm with the most miserable surroundings, the son of a poor shiftless Southern white, who did no more work than he could help on the few half-barren acres in the dreary backwoods that he and his squalid family occupied, Lincoln's early life gave no promise of his phenomenal future.

It was only after he was seven years old, he said, that he began to feel like a human being. He described himself as a hard-worked, shaggy-headed, ragged, barefooted boy who, when not working on his father's clearing, was hired out to other farmers to chop wood, dig ditches, plough, drive ox teams, or attend to cows and horses. This improvement he spoke of was owing to the family having then removed to another, small farm in Indiana. There his mother, originally Nancy Hanks having died, a stepmother replaced her who, being stronger and more energetic and industrious than her predecessor, took better care of the family. Here he found employment in a crossroads store and came in closer contact with civilization than he had done in Kentucky, through meeting the small farmers and tradesmen of the neighborhood.

He was also enabled to borrow some of the few books that they had and off and on attend the log school house near by, where he learned more than he knew before of the three R's—reading, writing and arithmetic. Later he went to the town constable's house to read th revised statutes of Indiana, and his eagerness to read caused some to make jocular remarks about his search for knowledge.

He, an uncouth boy, after his day's work was done would sit in a corner of the family log cabin or somewhere outside, devouring a book along with his corn bread; and whenever opportunity offered at other times he busied himself reading. In this way he read Robinson Crusoe, the Pilgrim's Progress, a short history of the United States, the Life of Washington and Aesop's Fables—all books that he had borrowed.

From these sources of information and knowledge he drew much material for talk in the crossroads store, and his sense of humor made his talk interesting to the customers, so that he gradually acquired a reputation for what they call spinning yarns—a talent which, we all know was one of his most prominent traits in after life.

He also grew rapidly in stature and by the time he was 17 he had reached

WAR GAME TO BEGIN MONDAY.

Torpedo Boat and Submarine Flotilla to be Engaged for a Week.

In Connection With Battleship Fleet Will Manoeuvre Off This Port.

An important war game will begin next Monday, when the torpedo boat and submarine flotilla, in conjunction with the battleships of the Atlantic fleet, will manoeuvre between the Brenton's Reef lightship, Montauk Point, and No Man's Land. The big fleet of battleships will arrive here in time to participate. Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, commander-in-chief, will have general charge of the manoeuvres, with Rear Admiral Aaron Ward in command of the First division and Rear Admiral Cameron McRae Winslow in command of the Second, while Captain E. W. Eberle will have command of the torpedo boat and submarine flotilla.

The operations will continue a week and will surpass in importance anything thus far attempted this year. The torpedo boat flotilla will operate in two divisions, an attacking and defending force, and will remain at sea throughout the entire practice. The submarine bell signal tests held last Monday were merely preliminary to these manoeuvres and have been going on since early spring.

Different exercises will be practiced each day and night, and will involve the whole fleet. An important part of the war game will be the signal tests of the torpedo boat destroyers in conjunction with the submarines, as well as anchorage tests, near the Point Judith breakwater.

After the week of war practice the fleet will return here, and the period from July 22 to 29 will be used to overhaul the torpedo boats and destroyers to put them in readiness for a full steam test the week following. The torpedo boat flotilla will assemble August 24 at Provincetown, Mass., where elementary torpedo and gun practice will be held.

Rear Admiral Osterhaus, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic fleet, on flagship Washington, Thursday sailed from Guantanamo for Hampton Roads, where he will change his flag to the Connecticut and proceed to Narragansett bay to direct the drills and exercises of the Atlantic fleet along the New England coast.

The vessels of the First and Second divisions, which have been visiting various places on the Atlantic coast for the Fourth of July, will come to Newport at once, and those of the Third and Fourth division, which have been at Key West and in Cuban waters, are already on the way north and will arrive early next week, when the entire fleet of 17 battleships will be gathered for manoeuvres in this vicinity.

The North Dakota will not be seen here again until fall. She has gone into the New York navy yard for her long overhauling. Last spring the truss bearing of her starboard engine cracked, and it involves much work to replace the injured one. It had been hoped at this time to put on a modern revolving conning tower, but the tower is not done. She is now having her guns taken out, preparatory to work about the turret sections.

THE NAVY DID ITS PART.

Much Bunting Displayed on the Fourth and Searchlight Practice Made Fine Showing.

Even though there was no naval parade on the Fourth, the navy did its part toward making the day one to be remembered. At colors all the ships dressed in colors, and there was a good deal of bunting displayed. There were in port 18 torpedo boat destroyers, all big craft, and when rigged out with flags they make a pretty showing. There were three auxiliary ships, one being the Dixie; three battleships—the Florida, Iowa and Massachusetts;—the Montgomery, a collier, the three parent ships of the submarine fleet with the submarines, and at the Training Station the Constellation, Cumberland and Reina Mercedes. All except the Severn were dressed in colors, making a total of 31 war vessels so decorated. At noon each one fired a national salute and there was some powder burned.

In the evening the three battleships were outlined in electric lights, the big Florida having a single line for the hull with masts and smokestacks outlined. The Iowa had a double row for the hull. They made a pretty picture to those who took a look on the waters or made a trip out in boats.

It was the searchlight practice, however, which made the finest showing. At one time 17 different searchlights were counted playing about the waters and on the clouds, which gave the lights a fine opportunity with their varying effects, something in the fireworks order being possible by the lights playing on the shifting clouds. The top of one of the wireless towers was shown and on the Dixie the flag was illuminated by searchlights and made a pretty showing. The searchlights could be well seen even by those at the beach, many of them being so thrown as to show in the sky to the eastward. This feature of the display was continued until after 10:30.

The yachts also helped in the show of bunting during the day. In the evening there were fireworks displays from the yachts, from the estates at the lower end of the harbor, at Fort Adams and at Jamestown, so that those who did not go to the beach had something well-worth seeing.
